INTRODUCTION

Some years back I delivered a lecture under the auspices of the University of Madras on the Puranas and it has been published in the Indian Historical Quarterly, Vol. VIII. No. 4. Ever since I have been pursuing the study of the subject and the result has been a feeling that a comprehensive index of the Purānas is a desideratum. We have an index of Vedic literature by Prof. Macdonell and A. B. Keith: we have also the index to the Mahābhārata by Dr. Sorenson. I felt that the most important branch of Indian literature, viz., the Puranas should similarly have an index for all the eighteen major Mahāpurānas. But due to want of time I have confined myself to five of them, viz., the Vāyu, the Brahmānda, the Vishnu, the Matsya and the Bhāgavata. Though the other Purānas are of equal historical importance and cultural value. I have selected these five because they are in my opinion the most ancient compositions among the eighteen Puranas. Their antiquity will be examined in the following pages in the section on the date of the Puranas.

As early as the thirties of the last century Mr. H. H. Wilson did some pioneer work in Purāṇa literature. From the Purāṇas available to him in print and manuscript he came to the hasty conclusion that they are a special kind of literature 'compiled for the evident purpose of promoting the preferential or in some cases the sole worship of Vishṇu or Śiva'. He was also of the view that Purāṇas as a class of literature must have come into existence not later than the 10th century A.D. and not earlier than the 7th and 8th centuries of the Christian era, when Śaivism and Vaishṇavism had become firmly established in the land. In other words, Wilson took the view that the Purāṇas were sectarian in character. The erroneous position which Wilson took in regard to the Purana literature did not go unrefuted by his own contemporaries. In this connection the name of Colonel Vans Kennedy may be prominently mentioned. He protested against the views of Wilson in the form of letters to the London Anatic Journal, (1840-41) and these have been reprinted by the late Editor of Wilson's Vishnu Purana as an appendix to that Purana. He put up an eloquent defence to the effect that the Puranas as a whole were as much a sacred work of the Hindus as the Vedic literature, and that Wilson misunderstood the preferential worship inculcated in this branch of literature as the exclusive worship of a particular deity and the votaries to be sectaries of either Vishnu or Siva He strongly upheld that the Puranes must be deemed as a class of ancient literature and that there was no proof satisfactory enough to show that the Puranes were late compositions We have next a set of scholars who took an abiding interest in the study of the Puranes and these were E. Bournouf who has translated and edited the Bhagavata Purana, Colonel Wilfred, and the compilers of catalogues of manuscripts like Thomas Aufrecht and Julius Eggeling.

A considerable time elapsed when F E. Pargiter by his learned publications Ancient Historical Tradition and Dynasties of the Kali Age showed to the world what amount of historical material and genuine historical tradition can be gathered from this mass of literature which goes by the name Puranas. His was a real attempt to obtain definite results to reconstruct the dynasties of the Kali age. He also endeavoured to study the chronology and genealogy of well-known Indian sages, seers and kings in pre-historic India. These two works of his evoked a revival of interest in a closer study of Puranic literature by Orientalists. Thus we have from Prof. Winternitz a sound and scholarly chapter on the Puranas in his History of Indian Literature No less learned is Prof. E. J. Rapson's contribution on Puranas to the first volume of the Cambridge History of India. We must also mention Willibald Kirfel, a German Orientalist who has written the Purāṇa Pañchalakshaṇa; it is another successful attempt to prove that the five topics dealt with in a Purāṇa are not born of fictitious imagination but a representation of the evolution of the universe treated earlier in Vedic literature. In this volume (Das Purana Pañcalakshana, 1927) all relevant common passages are collected together.

Among the early Indologists it was Lassen who critically examined the application of the epithet Pañchalakshana to the extant Puranas (Indische Alterthumskunde, Vol. I. p. 499). No doubt the five tonics of a Purāna are not to be found in all the Puranas; but that they deal with these topics in one way or other is a fact beyond dispute. Ancient lexicographers like Amarasimha attribute the five characteristics to a Purāna treatise. These five characteristics are: (1) Sarga or primary creation, (2) Pratisarga, secondary creation, (3) Vamsa or genealogy of gods and patriarchs, (4) Manvantara or epocs of Manu, (5) Vamśānucharita, or history of kings of solar and lunar races and their descendants. A close study of Purāna literature shows that the Puranas as a whole deal with the evolution of the Universe, recreation of the Universe from the constituent elements, genealogies of gods and seers, groups of great ages included in aeons (Kalpa) and the history of royal families of the Kali age.

Recently, Indian scholars in the different Universities have been taking a keen interest in Purāṇic literature and reconstructing the history of ancient India and the chronology of its kings with Purāṇic data. In fact the Purāṇas have now come to stay as one of the principal sources of information for ancient Indian history. The growing interest in the study of Purāṇic literature points to the need for a critical edition of all the eighteen Mahāpurāṇas which should form the basis for an authoritative index of all the Purāṇas.

THE TERM PURANA AND ITS ORIGIN

The etymology of the term Purāṇa is furnished by the Vāyu Purāna, (verse 203, Chap I) which runs thus:

Yasmāt purā hi anati idam purāņam

i.e. that which lives from very remote times. In other words it means some very ancient account or very old narrative. It also shows that the term was in use long before the Puranas were reduced to writing. This may be read with another stanza in the Väyu Purana itself which runs as follows:—

Prathmam sarvašāstrāņām purāņam brahmaņā smṛtam

Anantaram cha vaktrebhyo vedāstasya vinisartāh || (Vāyu I. 60)

As if to confirm this statement, in the Matsya Purana it is also said that it was Brahmā who first remembered the Purans and then revealed the Vedas. This means that originally there was only one Purana, and according to one authority it consisted of a hundred crore of verses. The stanza in the Vāyu Purāna together with that in the Matsya Purana gives then the clue that even long before the age of the Vedas, the Purana was thought of and was in existence, This is borne out by the fact that the Vedic literature, as we understand to-day, contains mythological and mythical lore, which must have been traditionally remembered, and when the Vedas were reduced to writing, these floating legends were referred to here and there. Thus there is the justification for the statement of the Matsya and Vayu Puranes that Brahma thought of the Purana before he thought of the Vedas. This need not mean and certainly did not mean that the Purăna as an independent literature grew up before the Vedic composition. It undoubtedly means that mythological and legendary lore existed from remote times and was handed down to posterity without interruption. If we can rightly understand these significant statements made by two ancient Purāṇas, we have to infer that the Purāṇa or old tales existed, but not Purāṇa literature as such.

There is also another account as to the origin of the Purāṇas as told by the Vishņu Purāṇa. In fact we have to look for their origins in the Vedic literature itself. The myths and legends to which allusion is made therein as well as the particular forms of prayer and worship inculcated, afforded ample material for the later compiler of the Purāṇa especially the sarga and pratisarga portions. These portions are intimately connected with the origin of the world. It is not difficult to believe that cosmogonic hymns of the Rg Veda Samhitā afforded a convenient material to build up a literary superstructure. There is therefore much justification for the remark of Prof. Macdonell that "those cosmogonic' hymns of the Rg Veda were not only the precursors of Indian Philosophy but also of the Purāṇas" (History of Indian Literature, p. 138).

Not only the sarga and pratisarga portions of the Purāṇas are indebted to the Vedic literature but also the numerous ancient legends which are scattered in the Brāhmanas (also included as a branch in the Vedic literature). The Brāhmanas mainly deal with the sacrifices and different rites and ceremonies and also contain special spells and prayers. In these particular forms of worship and prayer which are associated with the legends of yore, we are led to think that the foundations of the later Purāṇa literature were laid. According to Weber (History of Indian Literature, 1914. p. 24) the miscellaneous topics and subjects in the Purāṇas had their sources in these Vedic legends which were elaborated in content and character. arose a distinct class of literature which goes by the name of Puranas by the commencement of the epoch of the Upanishads.

Though we have been dealing with the Vedic origin of the Purana there are informing stanzes in the Visnu Purana which deal with their origin and evolution. According to this testimony, Vyasa, the sage, originally compiled what is known as the Purana Samhita and taught it to his disciple Lomaharshana. He was the Suta or the professional chronicler. Because he was a Sûta we must not misunderstand that he held an inferior position Lomaharshana was, on the other hand, a great sage. He had under him six disciples. These were Agnivarcha, Maitreya, Sāmsapāyana, Kasyapa and Savarni. To them he imparted the Purana Samhită as he heard it from his guru Vyāsa. He and his disciples were then the famous chroniclers of ancient India and their versions were respectfully heard in different learned assemblies, specially called for on the occasion of the performance of great unifies by the reigning monarch of the realm.

In the Agni Purana (Ch. II, 70, vv. 10-13) the same version is told but with a slight variation. This Purana makes Vyāsa imparting the Purāna Samhitā to his own six disciples. If we compare the names given here with the names mentioned in the Vishnu Purana (Bk. III, ch. 6, vv. 17-19) four names are common. The names given in the Brahmanda and Vayu Puranas as the disciples of Lomaharshans, also spelt Romaharshana, though slightly different, are common. Among these sages the names of Katvapa. Savarni and Samsapayana are mentioned as the authors of an independent Purana Samhita and these three together with Romaharshapa composed what is known as the Müla Samhitā (sometimes Pürva Samhitā) of the Purana literature. This would demonstrate that this was the first Samhita or the original Samhita from which the later Puranas developed, adding more information to what already existed. Among these again priority is given to Lomaharshana Samhitā; then came Kāsyapa's, then Savarni's and lastly, Samsapayana's Unfortunately these Puranas have been lost to us; but it is said that they contained four pādas or divisions which were named prakriya, anushanga, upodghāta and upasamhāra. But these chatushpādas are preserved to us in the existing versions of the Vāyu and the Brahmānda.

The Purāṇa writers who had an insight into these original versions spread far and wide the traditions contained in the Purāṇas. Though they did not merely repeat verbatim what they heard from their master, they did not tamper with the accounts narrated to them. They added something more here and there and thus enlarged the scope and contents of the Purāṇas. The expressions like anuśusruma, smṛtah, iti naḥ śrutam or iti śrutam are enough to point out that they carried on the tradition of the land faithfully. In some of the later Purāṇas also, the terms like Purāvit, Purāṇajña, Paurāṇika Jana, Vamśavit show the author's intimate acquaintance with the extant Purāṇas and their indebtedness to them.

This indirectly shows that ancient India was not devoid of historians and historical literature. Vamsavit and Vamśavittama are epithets which can be translated generally as 'historians of the ordinary type' and 'historians of authority'. Even among them were a few specialists as is evidenced by the expression, Somavamsavit, an authority on the history of the lunar race. Those who went about preaching and teaching the Puranas not only on the occasion of sacrifices but also in other places were known as Sūtas. The term Sūta has three distinct meanings (1) a great rishi and ayonija, (2) a charioteer, (3) a citizen of the Anūpa country. This Anūpa country is said to be on the east of Magadha. In addition to this there was in later times the Sūta of the mixed caste (pratiloma), i.e., a person born of a Kshatriya father and Brahmana mother, was a Suta by caste. This occurs both in the Manava Dharma Śāstra and the Mahābhārata.

Mr. F. E. Pargiter who has made a special study of the Purānas has been confused with this term Sūta as an ordinary human being belonging to a protiloma caste, being the narrator of the Purānas. Pargiter is undoubtedly wrong in his thesis. The mythical Sūta sprang out of the sacrificial fire of the first king of the earth, Pṛthu. He was therefore a venerable sage and ayonija. He first chromcled the story of Pṛthu. The Sūtas who ware the narrators of the Purāṇas and chroniclers of the kings, belonged to this family of the sage and were sages themselves. Thus it can be asserted without any fear of contradiction that the Purāṇas were narrated in different places by the sages who were known as Sūtas, being themselves versed in Vedic literature.

Based on this untenable theory Pargiter had built up another theory styling these Puranes as belonging to a distinct Kahatriya tradition On this western scholars began to speak of the Kahatriya literature, a Parivrajaka literature as distinct from Brahmanic literature. Surely these are imaginary theories, which have no less to stand on. According to the Hindu tradition the Puranas are the fifth Veda, and those who follow it are followers of the Vedic school. Even in the Vedic literature there are Kahatriya sages and · families to whom hymns are addressed. Taking the Rgveds, for example, nine families are mentioned of which the three. viz., Vaivasvata, Aila, and Cakshusha are Kahatriyas. There are again hymns in the Veda whose authorship is assigned to Vivasvān, Manu, Purūravas, Yayāti, Māndhāta, Visvāmitra, etc., names which are ever the pride of not only the Kshatriya community but of all communities From these several references is it proper to term this portion of Vedic literature as Kahatriya literature? So there is no justification either taking the Sute to be an ordinary man, or the classification of Sanakrit literature as Brahmanical or Kahatriva.

From this digression we shall revert to the topic under discussion. By the time of the Atharvaveda Samhita (v. 199: 11.7.24), the Purines had assumed some independent form and their compositions were generally familiar with the literary people of the land, though not with the masses. It took some more time before they were familiarised among the masses, and the latter took any interest in them. A reference in the Atharvaveda Samhitā from the verse addressed to the sage Nārada is evidently taken from some Purāṇa. But we cannot determine the name of the Purāṇa which was given to Nārada. But we can confidently assert that some Purāṇas were in existence.

The same inference can be drawn from the use of the term in the Upanishads. That a definite work is meant is seen from the seventh book of the Chāndogya Upanishad where Nārada explicitly says that he had mastered the Itihāsa and Purāṇa (VII.1.2 and 4). When we come to the epoch of Sūtra literature we find reference to the contents of the Purāṇas profusely quoted. The Āpastamba Dharma Sūtra for example, definitely mentions that the quotation was taken from the Bhavishyat Purāṇa. The Purāṇas are again mentioned by name in the Mahābhārata (I.5.55 ff.) both in their special and general sense. In a later book of the epic (Bk. XVIII) there is a definite mention of the Purāṇas as handed down by tradition.

Further among the particular class of literature prescribed for a prince as an important branch of study, Kautalya, who belongs to the fourth century B.C., mentions the Purāṇa in his epoch-making book, the Arthaśāstra. If we go further and examine literature by Amarasimha, one of the ancient lexicographers, he mentions Purāṇas and gives pañchalakshaṇa as the attributes to a Purāṇa treatise. Thus it is évident that the Purāṇas have become popular even in times before Amarasimha. It was honestly felt that it will take more than a life time to study the Vedic literature and as a result this Vedic literature was the monopoly of the few. But the masses hankered after some religious literature which would give them the old legends and tales and which would give them mental peace. So the Itihāsa-Purāṇa literature became popular with the masses. As they contained many interesting and valuable information, arrangements were made to expound them for the benefit of the public in the common hall of the village or town. It formed a useful course of general and adult education for which we are crying to-day.

It would appear that even men of letters went to hear the expositions of these Purāṇas. An instance in point is as furnished by the Harshacharta, that Bāna himself went to hear the Vāyu Purāṇa in his village. In general the Purāṇas contain many forms of worship and prayer, superstitions, a crude knowledge of geography and history, legendary descriptions of places of pilgrimage and rituals, some knowledge of astronomy and astrology, different schools of philosophy, easy methods of attaining salvation and others. These and other topics of a common place interest would cater largely to the taste of the common person. In this way the Purāṇic literature contributed largely to general culture.

Tradition has unanimously accepted the existence of eighteen Mahāpurānas and eighteen Upapurānas. The Upapūrānas are very late productions and are much more of a sectarian character while they are of purely local interest. Their value to the student of history and even religion, is very little and therefore we may dismiss them for the time being. Confining them to the Mahāpurānas, one classification is according to the preferential worship of delities like Siva, Viahņu, Devl. From the nature of the subjects dealt with, it is wrong to assume that the ancient Purāna literature was divided into few water-tight compartments like the Salva and Vaishnava. On this unfounded assumption, these works of value are looked upon as sectarian in character and extent. Whatever classification any Purāṇa may come under, the fact is that every Purāṇa speaks of almost of all deities. For example, in the socalled Saiva Purāņa, we come across legends of Vishņu, Brahmā and other gods together with their heroic exploits. This can be seen from the Vāyu Purāṇa itself. In the same way, in the so-called Vaishnava Purāna, the legends of Siva and other deities largely figure. Some Purāṇas extol the legendary exploits of a particular deity, and thus seem to inculcate preferential worship to that deity. From this we cannot rush to the conclusion that that Purāna is exclusively Śaiva or Vaishņava. Though a particular deity is extolled, it cannot be said that the other deities were ignored or condemned. One interesting point about these Puranas is that every Purana specifies the number eighteen together with their names. If it is really sectarian, it will not make mention of other sectarian Purānas.

It is difficult to ascertain the time and the occasion when these eighteen Purānas were moulded into their present shape. It does not stand to reason that all the Purāṇas were composed at one and same time and afforded the occasion to the compiler of each Purana to mention the names of the eighteen. The eighteen versions seem to have been the result of their version in different parts of the land. We would be lacking in historical sense, if we say, that all these Purānas were confined to a certain locality like the Naimishāranya. At the most the then busy centres of religious activity were perhaps the locale of the Purāṇa compilations. The chief places of pilgrimage were often thronged by a large number of people from all parts of India, and were the best venue for the propogation of this literature. From the detailed glorification of certain places, we may venture to conjecture that the particular version of the Purana sprang up in that centre. A Purana that deals with the Gayā māhātmya in extenso may be reasonably taken to have been compiled in the city of Gayā or its environs. way we must look for the compilation of this or that version of a particular Purāṇa in one locality or other,

THE AGE OF THE PURANAS

No question is more intriguing and more difficult of solution than the determination of the age of the Puranas. It has been admitted on all hands that there are eighteen Mahāpurēņas and these are mentioned in the epic Mahābhārata, by hearing which, it is said, that one gets the same spiritual glory as he would get otherwise. This may mislead a superficial reader that the Puranas were generally compositions preceding the Mahabharata. But if we examine the contents of the Puranas we are driven to the conclusion that several Puranas are to be placed after the composition of the Mahabharata It may be that some of the Puranas were prior to the epic. But in dealing with the royal dynastics the Purana or Puranas added to the already existing material. Hence, the composition of the Puranes is to be spread over a long time covering several centuries from the epoch of the Brahmanas and the Unanisads to the age of the Guntas and after. Further a close study of the Puranas shows that some were composed in the period prior to Mahavira and Gautama Buddha, while most of them came into existence in the epoch following them.

From the terms occurring in the older Puranas arhata, budhata, budhaya it has been pointed out by some writers that these terms refer to the Jaina and the Bauddha and must therefore be later in composition. But the fact is that nothing of the kind is mentioned and from the circumstances in which these terms occur, one has to understand them in their literal sense, viz., 'one who is honoured', 'one possessing wisdom'. These are epithets which are addressed to Siva as one of his names and they have nothing to do whatsoever with Jainism or Buddhism. In the Vishmu Purana it is said that in the dispute between the Gods and Anuras, Vishpu created Māyāmoha whose followers were designated as arkats. The scene of this occurrence is laid on the banks of the Narmada away from the birth-place of these so-called heretical sects which was in the Magadha kingdom. In propounding a theory we must take into account the circumstances in which an incident took place and also the place of its occurrence.

The Purāṇas then constitute a work of various periods in succession. For example, one and the same Purāṇa may have spread over a long period of some centuries. The kernel of the Purāṇa may have been born in the earlier times, and its contents could be amplified in the course of the following centuries. Thus we have the Purāṇas belonging to the epoch of the Upanishads, to the Sūtra treatises, to the epics, and to the post-epic periods. Therefore every Purāṇa must be judged by its contents, by its external and internal evidence, and its chronology fixed accordingly. We shall not attempt here at an examination of the date of all the Mahāpurāṇas but we shall confine ourselves to the five Purāṇas indexed in these volumes.

THE VAYU PURANA

We know it as a matter of fact that every Purāṇa furnishes us with a list of the eighteen Mahāpurāṇas. But all such lists are not identical; they vary slightly from one another. The Vāyu Purāṇa, for example, is omitted in the lists of the Padma Purāṇa, the Vishṇu Purāṇa, the Bhāgavata Purāṇa and Mārkaṇḍeya Purāṇa. The lists in the other Purāṇas do not fail to include the Vāyu Purāṇa as a Mahāpurāṇa. Sometimes the Vāyu Purāṇa is identified with Śiva Purāṇa and sometimes with Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa. As many as six Purāṇas have the name of Śivapurāṇa in their lists. But a close examination of the contents of these two Purāṇas shows that Vāyu and Śiva are not identical.

The apparent confusion may be due to the Vāyavīya Samhitā tacked on to the end of the extant Śivapurāṇa. But again there is no similarity between the Vāyavīya Samhitā and the Vāyu Purāṇa. It is reasonable to assume therefore that the Vāyu Purāṇa is an independent Purāṇa and has nothing common whatsoever with the Śiva Purāṇa or its section.

We have already examined the contents and the date of composition of this Purāna in a separate booklet entitled Some Aspects of the Vāyu Purāna published by the University of Madras, (in 1933) We shall for our present purpose touch upon the problem of its date.

As we shall show presently, some portions of the Purana can go back to the fifth century B.C. and carlier, while other portions must have been added or revised at the end of the third or fourth centuries of the Christian era. We are told in the Harshacarita that Bana attended the exposition of the Vayu Purana in his village. Bana could not have lived later than 625 A.D. and therefore the Purana was very much earlier. The epic Mahābhārata and its supplement Harivamia definitely make mention of the Vayu Purana (III, 194, 15), and therefore it is reasonable to take that this Purana is much anterior to the didactic epic. In its recommendation of particular modes of dancing accompanied by music to the ascetics as a means of attaining salvation, the Purana is on a par with the Yājñyavalkya Smrti where similar descriptions are found (III, 1, 13) According to the late Ganapati Sastri, the Law-book of Yajfiyavalkya is much earlier than the Kautalina, for which the generally accepted date is the 4th century B.C.

In the same way the Purana nowhere makes mention of religious sects like Buddhism and Jainism which came to stay in the fifth and fourth centuries B.C. The Purana is further an ardent advocate of the ancient Yoga theory. In as much as its injunctions regarding the practice of Yoga can be traced to Chalcolithic period of Indian history, as evidenced by the statues of the proto-historic and prehistoric Indus valley sculptures, we can say that it is the oldest of the Puranas, though we cannot say that it is as ancient as the Indus valley culture.

A study of the religion and philosophy of the Purana shows that the Purana is a typical representative of the transformation of the old Yoga school incorporating into it the salient features of both Yoga and Sānkhya. This metamorphosis took place perhaps in the period of the Upanishads, and therefore may be dated roughly in the fifth century B.C. It is interesting to know that the Purāṇa prescribes feeding of Yogis and ascetics for the Śrāddha, a practice which has long fallen into disuse. The fact that the Purāṇa harps on this is itself an eloquent testimony to its antiquity. It may be noted in passing that this Purāṇa does not preach exclusive worship of a particular deity.

We can add to these the artificial style of the Purana which recalls the language of the plays of the famous dramatist, Bhāsa. The late Ganapti Sastri has assigned on substantial grounds that these plays belonged to the sixth century B.C. The common features of the plays and the Purāna is the use of a large number of archaic (arsha). words and a large number of grammatical irregularities which suggest a period when the canons of grammatical treatise were still in the making. The references to Vyakarana, Bhāshya and Dharmaśāstra in a single line does not help us much in our enquiry. Again there is no reference in this Purāna to the Tantric system of worship, which consists of Devī conceived as Śakti, though we do not dispute the fact that Saktism as a form of religion was already in existence. But it is almost certain that this form of worship was not quite popular during the age of the Vāyu Purāņa.

According to its own version in the later chapters dealing with royal dynasties, the scene of the Purāṇa is laid in the reign of the Paurava king Adhisīmakrishṇa, who is said to have lived before the commencement of the Kali age. But his contemporaries were Senājit of Magadha and Divākara of the Ikshvāku dynasty. According to Prof. Rapson the genealogy assigned indicates a more definite date; for 'of his immediate forbears, Aśvamedhatta, Śaṭānika, Janamejaya, Parīkshit, all but the first, his father Aśvamedhatta, are no doubt to be identified with kings of the same names who appear in the Brāhmaṇas'. Therefore we have to look for a date prior to 1110 BC for Adhisimakrishna. From this we cannot imagine that the Purāna was composed as early as 1110 BC. It may be that a particular teacher narrated the ancient Purāna when Adhisimakrishna was ruling. The same version was more or less continued orally when it was reduced to writing perhaps in the 5th century BC. But there are portions in dealing with dynasties of the Kali age, where reference is made to the reign of Chandragupta I of the Gupta dynasty and also to the Hums who invaded India some time after. And this portion according to us was added to the verse already existing.

According to astronomical data furnished by this Purāna it may be placed at a period between B C. 204 and A.D 44. In as much as almost verbatim quotations from the Upanishads are made in this Purāna, we would not be far wrong in assigning this Purāna to the epoch of the early Upanishads From the 5th century B C the Purāna was enlarged, and this went on growing till 500 A.D. We therefore conclude that most of the portions were reduced in writing about the 4th and 5th centuries before Christ and the other portions were added now and then until it reached its present form somewhere between 350 B C. and 500 A.D.

THE BRAHMANDA PURANA

Already the suggestion has been made that the Vāyu Purāṇa is sometimes identified with the Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa. There is still a further suggestion that the Vāyu Purāṇa and the Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa were originally one Purāṇa and later on became separate into two Purāṇas. No doubt passages there are common to both the Purāṇas. It is reasonable to conjecture therefore that one is indebted to the other by borrowing many a passage from several sections. But tradition persists and includes Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa as a Mahāpurāṇa in the lists of all the eighteen Purāṇas. It is only the Vāyu Purāṇa that is omitted in some but this is not the case with Brahmāṇḍa. It may be that the Vāyu Purāṇa was composed later than the Brahmāṇḍa and vice versa.

Rāmā 1.64.8.

But the Brahmāṇḍa has been reckoned as also the Vāyu as the oldest Purāṇas now available. Perhaps the Brahmāṇḍa was a contemporary of the Vāyu Purāṇa.

The Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa contains almost the same accounts as given in the Vāyu Purāṇa. It is divided into four books and furnishes the impression that it is one of the oldest Purāṇas. But what interests us is the Lalitopakhyānam portion of the Purāṇa which forms the fourth book and consists of more then forty chapters. At this time the popular practices and beliefs about the Sakti cult were crude and strictly local. In introducing the Lalitopakhyāna portion in the Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa, the compiler of the Purāṇa must have felt that what may be regarded as the most debased side of Hinduism must be put an end to, and literature dealing with Her immanence was a crying necessity. The term Lalitā means lovely, elegant, or charming.

The Devi worship in India can be traced to remote antiquity, and in Vedic literature the Devi who is named Umā is no other than Brahmavidyā. In other words Devī has pleasing aspects and evokes not awe or dread, but lofty spiritualism and philosophic calm. In this book of the Brahmānda Purāna the Devī is elevated to a very high place, a place even worshipped by Trimurtis. In this section we have a description of the origin of the goddess, of the construction of Śripuram on which was modelled the Śrichakra, the war with Bhandasura and the final triumph of Lalitā. The Lalitā worship or Devī worship is not anything new but one accepted and approved by the Vedas. The Devi for one purpose or other manifested herself in different ways and with different names, and the manifestation of Lalitā was to get rid of Bhaṇḍāsura who was even a match for gods like Brahmā, Vishņu and Siva. Her glory and greatness are celebrated in the extant work entitled the Lalitā Sahasranāmam but this seems to be a composition later than the celebrated Sankara, who is commonly placed in the early years of the eighth century.

^{*} Valmiki speaks of apsaras Rambhā as Lalitā and the commentator comments the term as Sundarī i.e. charming. But this has nothing to do with the cult.

There is a well-known tradition that the great Sankaracharya wrote a commentary on the Lalita-Trisati. He thus attached a special significance to the worship of Lalita by addressing her with three hundred names of the Trisati. It has since then become a recognised mode of worship of the Devi by the orthodox Hindus for the advancement of their moral and material welfare. It would thus seem that the Lelita cult was popular in the days of Sankaracharya himself Even Kālidāsa who perhaps lived in the 1st century BC, refers to the worthin of Devi and though he mentions her by the name Candika, still he lays emphasis upon the saumus form of Devi worship. This is perhaps due to the Lalita Upakhyanam of the Brahmanda Purana. So we have to conclude that whatever be the purpose of the manifestation of Lalits, the Devi worship or worship of the world mother (Jagatam Mātā) was prevalent from Vedic times. and the Purana compiler was particularly interested in narrating the story of Lalita and thus laid stress upon its importance.

According to the Brahmanda Purana the Lelita cult was the most efficacious. The principal centres of Sakti worship as referred to in this Purana are Srinagar, perhaps in the present Kashmir and Kanci in South India. From the foregoing study the conclusion is inevitable that the Brahmanda Purana can come under the category of some of the oldest Puranas. As the major portions of the Purana are indebted to the Väyu Purana, we may safely venture the guess that the Brahmanda may be the immediate successor to the Väyu Purana, and the date for the Brahmanda would almost be the same as that for Väyu. In other words, the composition of this Purana may be roughly assigned to about the 4th century B.C. though we cannot be positive that the Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa in its present form came into existence even then.

THE MATSYA PURANA

As in the case of the Vāyu Purāna the scene of this Purāna is laid in the sacred forest of Naimisha where many of the great sages of India assembled to witness the sacrifice of Adhisīmakrishna, the Paurava king of much celebrity. Here too the list of 'future kings' is continued till the last of the kings of Andhra dynasty. The Guptas are not mentioned. And this gives the certain clue that the last redaction of the Matsya Purāņa must have taken place not later than the commencement of the Gupta epoch and immediately after the dismemberment of the Andhra empire. The latest date for the Purana must be found somewhere towards the close of the third century as the Guptas commenced their rule from about 320 A.D. But this does not solve the problem. The real difficulty lies in fixing the upper limit of the Purana. Though the Purana definitely says that Adhisimakrishna was the reigning king by the use of the expression, Sāmpratam we cannot assign such an early date to this Purana. Perhaps some portions of the Purāna must have been in existence then. Subsequently additions were made from time to time until the beginning of the Gupta era.

As it refers to the flood legends it must be posterior to the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, forming part of the Yajurveda and anterior to the Gṛhyasūtras. From the latter he differs in point of injunctions such as Ekoddiṣṭam, Āmaśrāddham, Piṇḍanirvapanam, etc. The Purāṇa mentions the names of Vyāghrapāda, Patañjali and Kātyāyana, and also refers to the Arthaśāstra and Bābhravya Pāñchāla. It also refers to the Nāṭyaśāstra of Bharata. From these references the Matsya Purāṇa must be undoubtedly post-Pāṇinīan.

But in speaking of the style of architecture it refers to the sikhara style which undoubtedly originated with the Mauryas It is familiar with the twin epics the Mahābhārata and Rāmāyana. In some places it seems to refer to the sections in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa. Perhaps the Bhāgavata Purāṇa supplemented what was actually wanting in that Purāṇa.

There is also an interesting reference to Vaikhānasa. It presupposes an elaborate form of image worship and furnishes details as to the architecture of the temples. The Vaikhānasa sūtra is referred to by the Baudhāyana Dharma Sastra. In the epoch of the Matsya Purana and very much earlier, the Vaikhānasa school had come to stay and the Pancharatra was yet a thing of the future Further the Purana mentions the worship of the moon as an independent deity. It is only from the days of Varahamihira that the worship of the moon came to be merged as it were in that of the sun. Though we have no temples extant solely dedicated to the moon, traces of ancient modes of worship of that deity still linger in the Tamil land, for instance, the Piraitoludal or seeing the moon on the third day after the New Moon. There is also an interesting reference to the use of betel leaves. We need not go into other references but we may safely say that the date of the Matsva Purana is probably to be spread over a number of centuries commencing with the 4th century B.C. and ending with the 3rd century A.D.

Though there are certain data which may be peak of a higher antiquity, still the language and style of the Purana preclude us from being guided by mere references, some of which might have been accidental. There are no archaic expressions and the Purana indicates that it is far ahead of the Sütra form of style employed by the authors of the Arthaisatra and Kāmastitras. The stanzas are couched in elegant literary style in conformity to the Paninlan standard. Though we cannot definitely fix a period for the upper limit of the age of this Purana, still we would not be far wrong if we fix it at the 3rd century B.C. It is quite plausible that some of the Purāṇa texts are older; but we are actually concerned with the probable period during which the Matsya Purāṇa as we know to-day, took its shape.

According to Pargiter "there is an apparent indication that a compilation was begun in the later part of the second century in the Andhra king, Yajñaśri's reign, for, five manuscripts of the Matsya Purāṇa speak of him as reigning in his ninth or tenth year". As against this theory two objections can be raised. One is that the reading in one manuscript militates against another. Even granting for the sake of argument, the reading is correct, what answer have we to give for the continuance of the list to the very end of the Andhra dynasty? If we have to take as Pargiter would have it, the Purāṇic list must come to an end with Yajñaśrī; but it is not so. The kings who succeeded Yajñaśrī are correctly and precisely mentioned. It appears more logical and more reasonable that in that century the dynastic portion was brought up-to-date, for, other portions of the Purāna bear an air of antiquity about them. On this account we can very well assign to this Purāna a place among the oldest of the Puranas. If by the term 'oldest' is meant only second century A.D., we are not only prepared to grant it but also to go further back by three or four centuries (See, for details, the Matsya Purāna, a study, published by the University of Madras, 1935).

THE VISHNU PURANA

This Purāṇa has been credited with a certain amount of antiquity, as being the best conserved of all. According to tradition, it is narrated by sage Parāśara in the reign of Parīkshit, king of the Kurus. From Parīkshit to Adhisīma-Krishṇa, there may be an intervening period of four generations. If tradition can be believed then we have to take it that the Vishṇu Purāṇa was composed four or five generations before the other Purāṇas came into existence. Pargiter would assign to this Purāṇa a period not earlier than the 5th century A.D. The version in this Purāṇa and the Harivaméa bears correspondence and similarity in some cases, and it has been said that the Vishnu Purāna must be indebted to the Harivaméa giving a late date arbitrarily to the latter. Whatever be the similarity between the Harivaméa and the Vishnu Purāna, it need not deter us from determining the date of the Vishnu Purāna. The remarkable fact about this Purāna is that it is the work of a single hand, for it presents a single whole with a well prepared plan. In its historical portion the account of the Gupta dynasty is given, but this does not mean that the Purāna was composed then, but more material was added at that time

Though the various Puranas existed, the late H. H. Wilson selected the Vishnu Purana for translation into English as it treats of the five specific topics or pancalakshna, and as it was not sectorian in character. The Purana itself is divided into six books, the first devoted to the primary and secondary creation, the second to the legend of Bharata, the third to a description of the leading institutions of the Hindus, the fourth to the kings of lunar and solar dynasties of India, the fifth to the life of Krishna, and the sixth to the dissolution of the world in both its major and minor cataclysms. We have been rather at length upon the material contained in each book of this Purana to disillusion a section of the people who regard it as a Vaishnava Purima and consequently sectorian in character. But the fact is otherwise. Its teachings were not intended solely for the Vaishnavas but appeal to all classes of people who regard the work as a sacred one expounding Vedic literature and Philosophy, Another factor of much importance is that a student of this Purāṇa fails to notice the fasts and feasts, the ceremonials and ceremonies, festivities and sacrifices, all connected with the deity called Vishṇu. From the absence of these rituals one may infer that this Purāṇa was not intended for the propagation of only the Valshṇava religion. What is more remarkable is even the sacred places, the places of pilgrimage dedicated to Vishņu, and his worship are not mentioned. From this we have to conclude that these special rituals had not yet come into existence at the time when the Purāṇa was reduced to writing. This fact compels us to rank it among ancient Purāṇas, perhaps as the oldest among them.

In this connection we can once again point out that a sort of homogeneity pervades the whole of this Purāṇa and it hardly indulges in Māhatmyas and the like which are found in the other literature of this class. These facts force us to conclude that this Purāna perhaps belonged to the age of the Upanishads when there was wide speculation about the philosophy of religion, and when there was no glorification of this god or that, and when there was faith only in one God who pervaded the whole universe and manifested himself in different ways for specific purposes. If we take these things into consideration, the Vishņu Purāna must be contemporaneous with the Atharva Veda Samhitā but it can be safely placed in the 6th or 5th century B.C. Though orthodox tradition would assign a much higher antiquity to this Purāna, a critical student of history would place its composition in the epoch of the Upanishads which may be roughly said to extend from the seventh to the fourth century B.C.

A word might be said about reference to it in ancient Tamil literature. In the Tamil epic Maṇimekhalai, roughly of the second century after Christ, in the course of a discussion of the various religious activities in the Tamil land at a gathering at Vañji, the renowned capital of ancient Cheras, there is a significant phrase Kaḍal Vaṇan Purāṇam ōḍinan (Canto 27. 11.98-99). This means that the Purāṇa dedicated to Kaḍal Vaṇan which is simply an epithet of Vishṇu, (the God who had the colour of the sea) is mentioned. Then it is reasonable to take the view that this reference in the Maṇimekhalai is distinctly to the Vishṇu Purāṇa, and that the Vishṇu Purāṇa was known to the author of the Maṇi-mekhalai. For a Purāna to be popularised and expounded, and that too in the Tamill land, it must have taken a considerable time after its composition was made. Therefore, this evidence of Tamil literature may possibly point to a much higher antiquity than the second century A.D. And we are inclined to put it down to a date much earlier than the fourth century B.C which has been even suggested to some Purānas by the late scholar V A. Smith. (V A. Smith. Early History of India, 4th Edn. pp. 22-24, V. R. R. Dikshitar, IHQ, 1931, the Age of the Vishnu Purāna ; V. R. R. Dikshitar, the Age of the Vishnu Purāna being a paper read at the Indian History Congress, Cuttack, 1949) There are at least four or five Purānas which existed some centuries before the Christian era and we have no doubt that one such Purāna is the Vishnu Purāna.

THE BHAGAVATA PURANA

Scholars, European and Indian, have now come to believe that the Muktāphala was after all a work much dependant upon the Bhāgavata Purāna, and in his Harilila, Bopadeva has simply indexed the Bhāgavata Purāna. It has been admirably pointed by Prof. Winternitz that the Bopadeva theory cannot stand critical examination (History of Indan Literature, Vol. I, p 556). The Srimad Bhāgavatam which is undoubtedly a Mahāpurāna is commonly regarded as Vaishņava Purāṇa. No doubt it deals with the avatārs of Vishņu, particularly with the avatār of Krishna. Be' it noted that Krishna is a common god even to-day much worshipped by the people. The Srimad Bhāgavatam conceives Krishna as a Vedic god; and in the Bhāgavata there is also the glorification of Siva and there is no sectarian animosity towards Saiva worship.

Most vital to our point is the cult of Sankarshana-Vāsudeva which prevailed from the 6th century B C. to about the 3rd century A.D. In the religious system of India, Pāṇṇi and Patabjah referred to Vāsudeva as a divine being glorified by the Sātvatas, one of the Yādava tribes when Sri Krishna was flourishing. The Bhāgavata says that Vāsudeva and Baladeva were regarded as gods by Sātvatas, corroborated by the Nārāyaṇīya section of the Mahābhārata. Even the Tamil country was familiar with this cult as could be seen from the Silappadikāram, a Tamil classic of the second century A.D. The cult of Balarāma was slowly given up and in the new system of religion that arose, only Vāsudeva remained as the supreme God who was identified with Nārāyaṇa. We are at some length on this question because the Bhāgavata Purāṇa does not mention in so many words the Sankarshaṇa-Vāsudeva cult. It would appear then that the Bhāgavata Purāṇa was composed after the Vāsudeva-Sankarshaṇa cult disappeared, and when the Vāsudeva cult was all in all. This must have been the time when the imperial Guptas were rising into prominence.

We have therefore to dismiss the theory of R. G. Bhandarkar and Pargiter as to the date of this Purāṇa, and there should be no hesitation in putting it down as a work of the 3rd century A.D. The reference to Vishṇu Purāṇa in the Tamil classic of 2nd century A.D. must show, as has been already said, that it must have been composed some two or three centuries before. The Bhāgavata which follows the Vishṇu Purāṇa in its major details, must be more or less in the neighbourhood of the date of the composition of the Vishṇu Purāṇa. It would not be then unreasonable to say that the Bhāgavatam was a work of the third century A.D.

When we are examining this question two things strike a student of history. One is the prominence given in the religion of the Guptas to the worship of Varāha, the third incarnation of Vishņu and the other is that the imperial Guptas styled themselves as Paramabhāgavatas meaning that they were wedded to the cult of the Bhāgavata. The Bhāgavata school was characterised by the system of Bhakti or devotion. The Śrimad Bhāgavatam deals with Varāha Avatār in extenso and the term Bhagavān as understood in those days was applicable to any god or sage who had all the six attributes connoted by the term Bhaga. In these circumstances we are obliged to think that the imperial Guptas. Smartas as they were, held as sacred the Srimad Bhagavatam as its tenets appealed to them most. We conclude therefore with Sir Charles Eliot that the Srimad Bhagavata could not belong to the latest class of Puranas, for "it seems to contemplate the performance of Smarta rights, not temple ceremonial" (For details, see my article in the Journal of the Madras University, January and July 1949, pp 87 to 95 on the Date of the Bhagavata Purana.)

THEIR HISTORICAL VALUE

To the historian of ancient India, the Puranas are an unfalling source of information. They help us to reconstruct the history of Indian culture and civilization. By culture and civilization we mean the history of Indian polity, of Indian society, the history of religion and philosophy, legal history, the history of arts and crafts, architecture and iconography besides royal dynasties and the period of their rule. With regard to the Indian political institutions in the past, there are some valuable chanters in several Puranas and particularly in the Matsva Purana. The elective and hereditary character of monarchy, the king's rights and duties, the qualifications of councillors and ministers. systems of taxation, and administration of justice are all found described with a wealth of detail. Some Puranas like the Agni Purana furnish material for the construction of fortifications, rules of warfare methods and weapons of war, diplomacy, etc. (See also V. R. R. Dikshitar, on the Polity of the Puranas in the "Indian Review", 1935, No. 6, Madras)

In the same way a student of sociology will meet with details with regard to movements of people, their manners and customs, and in short their culture. There are materials about the castes and tribes of ancient India, both indigenous and foreign. For example, the Vishnu Purāṇa speaks of the Kirātas on the eastern boundary of Jambū-dvīpa and the Yavanas on the western territory. There are also enough material as to the conventions of society and how their non-observance led to the degradation of persons. We also see how people were divided into a number of communities and how this division was made to rest on occupation and profession, and how their hereditary character promoted family spirit in all walks of life.

From the point of view of the development of Indian religion and philosophy the Purāņas are again infalliable sources. In some of them we find the Sāmkhya system predominating. They preach in detail how to observe karma, yoga and bhakti. In season and out of season they teach how to cultivate detachment and aim at the identification with the supreme spirit to get riddance of samsāra. a student of law and legal institutions will find ample scope to write a legal history of the Hindus. Many chapters in several Puranas seem to be a reproduction of the old Dharmasūtras and Dharmaśāstras. There are regulations relating to varna, āśrama, and administration of justice. There is equally valuable information with regard to arts and crafts. Even serious students of Hindu music are baffled by chapters especially in the Vāyu Purāņa and the Brahmāṇḍa devoted to music. There is plenty of reference to painting, dancing and other arts:

References are made now and then to guilds and corporations discharging their functions satisfactorily according to conventions. There are also passages in some Purāṇas about the development of architecture and iconography. The origin of house-building is furnished by the Brahmāṇḍa Purāṇa and supplemented by the Matsya Purāṇa. Temples and temple-building as well as image-making are also dealt with. Installation of images on auspicious occasions covers portions of the Purāṇas, especially in the Matsya Purāṇa. These and other things are all found scattered in the pages of the Purāṇa literature. And a student of ancient India will be profited by critically studying them.

By far the most important chapters in the Puranas are the Vaméanucarita portions The historians of ancient India have tested this material in the light of archaeological and epigraphical evidences and found them almost accurate. The Puranes which speak of the royal dynasties are twelve in number. The version of the Vishnu Purana with regard to Mauryan dynasty and of the Vāyu Purāna with regard to the early Guptas has found general acceptance among scholars. We are not concerned with the lunar and solar race of kings; but after the war of the Mahabharata, which Pargiter is inclined to place about 1100 B.C., three lines of kings are mentioned. These are Purus, Ikshvakus and the kings of Magadha. The history of these three dynastles formed largely the history of ancient India. There is a continuity in the dynastic list up to the epoch of the Andhras. The Puranas place the Andhras after the Kanva kines and calculate the intervening period between these two dynasties to be 157 years This has to be discredited, for the first of the Andhra kings is said to be much earlier in date than the first of the Sunga kings.

Several Purāṇas contain accounts of genealogies of kings. It is not possible to say which accounts are the oldest and which are reliable. With regard to names of kings and their rule there seems to be some difference of opinion among the Purāṇas writers, though there is general agreement in the majority of cases. An examination of the lists in individual Purāṇas would be of no value to the historian on account of corruptions and omissions and even interpolations. The extant Brahmāṇda Purāṇa, for instance, does not contain the latter half of the Āṇava genealogy, the Paurava genealogy and a portion of the dynastics of the Kalı age; but these are found in the Vāyu Purāṇa.

There is again an incomplete version of the North Păńchâla genealogy in the Brahma Purāna. Further the Brahma account furnishes two different origins for the Kanyākubja and Kāśi dynasties. The incompatibility of these origins manifests itself as erroneous. Again, when the Agni Purāṇa relates these two dynasties, Kanyākubja and Kāśi, the account seems to be vitiated by error. The Matsya and Linga Purāṇas assign six kings to the Ikshvāku dynasty, but the Vāyu Purāṇa mentions thirty-one kings. The Kūrma Purāṇa contains more matter for chronicling the king Vasumanas, as well as the Haihaya monarchs, Jayadvaja and Durjaya. The Mārkaṇdeya Purāṇa furnishes in detail the early history of the Vaiśāla dynasty.

We have been at some pains to show that different Purānas contain different accounts of different dynasties. But a student of history must collate together the various details all scattered, and sift historical truth therefrom. One word more. Referring to the coronation of the Nanda two intervals are given. The interval between the death of Parīkshit (the year of the Mahābhārata war) and the coronation of Nanda is said to be 1015 according to one version and 1050 according to another. The interval between the coronation of Nanda and of the Andhra dynasty is said to be 836. According to the Kali abda era, the year 5038 corresponds to A.D. 1937. Subtracting the stellar cycle of twenty-seven centuries, we get 2338. If we again proceed to subtract 1937 from 2338, we get 401 B.C. which can be taken as the date of the accession of Nanda, though V. A. Smith would remark that Nanda was a powerful king even in 415 B.C. But whatever may be the date assigned to Nanda, the Purānas offer a workable hypothesis for a system of ancient Indian chronology.

Now comes my pleasant task; my thanks are due to the Syndicate of the University of Madras for having undertaken to publish these volumes of the Purāṇa Index under the auspices of the Madras University. We hope and trust that these volumes with their encyclopaedic information will prove to be a source-book for students of ancient Indian history and culture, and stimulate further interest among the advanced students to the preparation of a similar index for the remaining thirteen Mahapuranas.

Returned home with this message.⁵ When the night passed by, Akrūra started for the vraja of Nanda thinking all the way of the meeting and embraces of Kṛṣṇa and Rāma who had made friends with people of Brindavan. Reached Gokula by evening.6 Saw Rāma and Kṛṣṇa in fine deportment and form, milking cows: prostrated before them in divine ecstasy. Welcomed in the proper way by the brothers and Nanda, Akrūra was lost in wonder, and did not feel the fatigue of the journey. Gopis who came to know of Akrūra's mission called him Krūra for taking away Krsna from their midst.8 It was early morning when Akrūra and the two brothers started after morning prayers. Reaching the Yamunā, Akrūra went to the river for a bath, asking the brothers to stay in the chariot. But he was surprised to see the brothers in the waters, and at the same time in the chariot also. He also saw Hari reclining on Śeṣa.9 Akrūra's praise of Hari.10 Congratulating himself on his luck to have had a darśan of Hari, he drove Kṛṣṇa and Rāma to Mathurā before sunset.11 Invited Krsna to his home, and the latter agreed to go to his place only after Kamsavadha. Amṛtotpādanam (see Amṛtam)—suggested by Hari-Aiita to secure immortality for gods. It was to churn the ksīroda with Mandara as stick and Vāsuki as rope. The Asuras agreed to aid the gods in securing Amrta. Hari took hold at first of the head, and when the Asuras protested, of the tail of Vāsuki. Seeing exhaustion on the part of gods owing to obstacle of Vighnesa, Hari propped up the Mandara hill, assuming the form of a tortoise. With continuous effort. the churning went on. First appeared Hālāhala which was consumed by Siva on an appeal from the Prajapatis and with the permission of Pārvatī. Then came out Kāmadhenu which sages appropriated for agnihotra; Uccaiśśravas, a horse which Bali took: then Airāvata: Kaustubha gem appropriated by Hari, then Pārijāta, Apsaras women and then Srī married to Hari. Then came out Vārunīdevī whom Asuras seized, then Dhanvantari with a pot of Amrta. There was then a rush on both sides to get the Amrta first when Hari assumed the form of Mohini and arrested their attention. Moved by her beauty, both gods and Asuras agreed to let her distribute the Amrta to all of them. She began with the gods and was serving them first. Noticing this Rāhu took the guise of a god. On being pointed out by the sun and moon, Hari cut off his head with his Cakra. The Asuras found that they had been deluded by Hari and set their face against Him. See Amrtam.

Ambarica (1)—the son of Nabhaga. A devotee of Hari. The curse of Durväsas proved ineffective in his case. Though lord of seven continents, Ambarica knew that glory was perishable. He devoted himself to the service of Hari, and got to know the power of His yoga. A saintly king. Performed the Aivamedha in a desert region so as to compel R. Sarasvati flow back towards it. Pleased with him, Harl presented his Colora to him. He observed the Dradasi viata, for a year at the end of which he gave gifts to Brahmanas and was preparing to feed them. There then came Durväsas who agreed to be fed. He went to the Yamuna for bath and was engaged in contemplating on Brahman. The time for breakfast came and the sage did not return.

So the king broke his fast with only water and waited food expecting the sage's arrival. The sage on his return found that the king had broken his fast, and grew angry and created a flaming goddess to attack him. Hari's Cakra burnt her, turned towards the sage who ran everywhere and to the Trimūrtis in vain. Advised by Hari, the sage apologised to the king who prayed to the Cakra and set the sage at liberty. The king who had not taken food requested him to accept his hospitality which Durvāsas gladly did. Blessing the king, the sage went back to Brahmaloka. Later the king bestowed his kingdom on his sons and retired to the forest for a life of penance and prayer. Had three sons Virūpa and others. A mantrakrt who made the 16 great gifts.

Arjuna (1) (Kārtavīrya)-son of Krtavīrya. Lord of seven islands and of Haihayas, Samrat and Cakravartin. By the grace of Hari he got 1000 arms and enjoyed astaaisvaryas. Learnt the merit of 110ga from Dattatreya, Ruled in peace for 85,000 years1 and was ambitious to have more territorial possessions.* Was engaged in water-sports with women wearing the garland of Valjayanti.3 Imprisoned Ravana in his capital Mahismati and released him on an appeal from Pulasya.4 In the course of a hunting expedition, he came to the hermitage of Jamadagni who entertained him with the help of his Kamadhenu. The king, envious of the sage's prosperity, desired its possession, and on being refused by the sage, he took the cow by force." Parasurāma who was away, heard the story on his return, went to Arjuna's capital, cut off his head with his axe after a terrible battle in which Matsvarāja took part and recovered the cow and the calf. Jamadagni regretted his son's action as the king was a Naradeva, and killing him was an offence greater than brahmanicide. Had 1000 (?) sons, (100 sons) all of whom except five died in battles. These sons killed Jamadagni when Rama and his brothers were gone out.* These five were great warriors His minister was the evil Candragupta and the Purchita, Garga.10 Incarnation of Visnu Cakra;11 to his family belonged Talajangha,13 performed thousands of yajñas with golden vupus and vedis, which were attended by gods. A Rājarsi, pasupāla, ksetrapāla." Defeated Karkotaka's son at Mahiamati and established his city on the banks of the Narmada. Could control the waters of the Narmada and the fury of the ocean: a terror to Asuras in Pātāla as also to Raksasas and Uragas. Defeated Ravana and released

Arjuna (III)—a Pāṇḍava, son of Indra and Kuntī and father of Śrutakīrti. Had a son Irāvān by Ulūpi and another son Babruvāhana by the daughter of Maṇipurapati. Father of Abhimanyu by Subhadrā.¹ Promised Draupadī to cut off Aśvathāma's head and place it before her for his killing her sons when asleep. Aśvathāma heard this and ran for escape. Arjuna pursued him. Unwilling to slay the son of his preceptor, he bound him with ropes and took him to his queen's presence. She requested Arjuna to release him on the ground that he was a Brāhmaṇa, a son of the guru, and for the sake of his old mother Gautamī. Bhīma was not for the release. But Arjuna took the hint from Kṛṣṇa, and after depriving him of his crest-jewel, banished him.²

Accompanied Yudhişthira to see Bhīşma on the eve of his death.³ A playmate of Kṛṣṇa.⁴ Had a chariot with monkey standard. Kṛṣṇa returning with Satyā of Kośala. Commended by Indra to Kṛṣṇa's protection. Consoled by Kṛṣṇa when banished to the forest. A great name among the Kurus. Joy at Kṛṣṇa's visit to Indraprastha. By burning the forest he released Maya and enjoyed Kṛṣṇa's company. Went to the eastern countries. Went again with Kṛṣṇa and Bhima disguised as a Brāhmana to Girtvraja. Revealed himself before Jarāṣandha who thought that he was not his equal. Returned after Jarāṣandha's fall.

Entertained elders at the Rājasūya of Yudhisthira. On seeing the enemy's army in the battle-field, his teachers, kith and kin among them, he expressed to Kṛṣṇa his reluctance to fight them. Kṛṣṇa taught him the truth (Gitā), showed him his Viśvarūpa and roused him to action. He fought, Kṛṣṇa serving as charioteer.¹⁰ Victory due to Kṛṣṇa.²¹

Heard of Abhimanyu's death and vowed to kill Jayadratha the following day, which he did. Was taken by Kṛṣṇa to Kailāsa where Siva blessed him. Took part in the svayamvaram of Lakṣmaṇā. His arrow touched the fish target but did not hit it. In the course of his pilgrimage he heard at Prabhāsa that his uncle's daughter Subhadrā was being proposed by Balarāma to Duryodhana. He wished to marry her, and with this object spent four months in Dvāraka as Tridandī ascetic. At this time Rāma invited him one day for bhikṣā. When he and Subhādrā met, both exchanged their love by their eyes. On a day of festive occasion Subhadrā came out, when Arjuna carried her off in a chariot with the approval of Kṛṣṇa. Rāma protested but Kṛṣṇa pacified him. Finally Rāma sent presents to his sister. On a visit to Syamantapañcaka.

At this Arjuna went to Indra's place, and Yama's, and to the abodes of all gods, with the resolution to fall in a fire in case he did not rescue the child. Unable to recover it, Arjuna was about to plunge into the flames when Kṛṣṇa prevented him. He was taken to the abode of Nārāyana and all the children were recovered. Returned to Dvārakā to attend Kṛṣṇa's aśvamedha, after bringing joy to the Brāhmana. 16 Other exploits of Arjuna were defeating Indra at Khāndaya, pleasing Siva in Kirāta's disguise, and vanguishing Nivātakavacas.¹⁷ Went once to Heaven to please Indra, when he slew singlehanded 60,000 dānavas who obstructed yajñas. 18 Went to Dvārakā to see his relations. Was advised to take Yādavas to Indraprastha as Dvārakā was about to be swallowed by the sea. Performed the last rites to the dead in Dvārakā, and took the remainder to his place. Was defeated by robbers and Abhiras after the departure of Krsna to Heaven. Informed Yudhisthira of Kṛṣṇa's departure to Heaven and of his great sorrow, and also of the almost end of the Yādava stock. Crowned Vajra king. 19 Arjuna knew and realised the māyā of Hari.20 Observed the Ādityaśayanam vow. Visited the Vāmana temple at Kurukṣetra during his tīrthayātrā and asked Saunaka to narrate the circumstances of that Avatār after Vārāha.21 Was asked by Vyāsa to perform penance expelling death.22 Put down the prowess of Kārtavīrya by the curse of Āpava.23 Known as Pārtha, Dhanamjaya, Jisnu.

Indra (1)—(Sahasrākṣa, Devendra, etc.). A Lokapāla. He and three other Lokapalas have their cities on the Manasottara mountain in Puşkaradvīpa; worshipped for vigour of organs.2 Served as calf for gods to milk from the Earth.3 Presented Prthu with a crown.4 Deprived Prthu of his sacrificial horse during the hundredth Aśvamedha. Urged by Atri, Prthu's son pursued Indra, when the latter abandoned the house and disappeared. A second time Indra deprived Prthu of his horse; when the king's men pursued him, he left the horse and went away in disguise. This enraged Prthu, who aimed his arrow at Indra but was pacified by Brahmā in the name of dharma. A reconciliation was effected when Prthu embraced him.5 Invested Vijitāśva with power of moving about unseen by others.6 Jealous of Rsabha, refused rains for his kingdom Ajanābha. Bestowed Javanti on him.7 During Hiranyakasipu's absence at Mandara hill, Indra captured his queen and took her to his heavenly abode. Nārada intervened and set her at liberty.8 Took up his vajra against Cyavana for allowing Aśvins to partake of soma juice. But Cyavana's tapas tied down his arms, when Indra yielded.9

his city for six years. Awarded Hanscandra a golden chariot after his Purusamedha, 11 Robbed Sagara's sacrificial horse and left it near Kapila's hermitage. 12 Performed a sacrifice which was attended by Vasistha. 12 Joined the gods in Tärakämaya war 14 Asked Gandharvas to take back Urvaši hving with Purūravas. 14 Helped by Rāji, gave back his kingdom. After his death, his sons refused to give back the kingdom, and Indra slew all of them. 14

Cursed by Durvasa, he lost all fortune. The three worlds became empty. Varuna and other gods conferred with Brahma. Finding no means to restore their fortunes, they repaired to Hari Ajita when Brahmā belauded Hari as mahāvibhūti. Hari advised them to secure Bali's alliance 17 When the Deväsura war broke out, the gods fought with Bali who defeated them. At that time Indra prayed to Hari for help Encouraged by the latter, the war was renewed and Balı was defeated. At this Jambha offered to fight Indra and disabled his elephant. Mātali supplied a chariot and Jambha's head was cut off. Namuci, Bala and Påka attacked Indra The latter two were slain. Namuci proved too much for Indra's vajra. A voice from the sky told Indra that Namuci could not be crushed by a wet or dry thing. Then Indra used phena (foam) and vanquished him. Bali in the meantime gathered strength and beseiged Indra. Indra sought counsel of Brhaspati who cared for his welfare, and as advised by the latter, he abandoned the city.18

Got back Heaven from Vāmana-Hari. He took him to his abode. Defeated by Arjuna who got the sabhā made by Maya. Arjuna for a short time shared his throne. Defeated by Arjuna at Khāndava. Kavacas.²¹ Afraid of Nara's superior powers, sent Kāma to spoil his tapas; was struck with fear with the sage's greatness;²² sent nymphs to disturb Mārkaṇḍeya's vrata but in vain.23 Sheltered Takṣaka and was about to be sacrificed when Bṛhaspati luckily intervened.24 Said to be afraid of the Kurus.²⁵ Attended Varuṇa's sacrifice and Yudhiṣthira's.26 For his sake Hari went to Bali in the disguise of a Brāhmaṇa.27 Once he sat with Indrāṇī in his sabhā surrounded by all gods. In his pride he did not welcome his preceptor Brhaspati in the proper way. The latter went away home at once and concealed himself from the gods. On this the Asuras attacked the gods. Indra repented and on Brahmā's advice appointed Viśvarūpa as his preceptor. Having been initiated into the Vidyā Varma Nārāyaṇātmakam, he was enjoying his original prosperity. One day Indra discovered that a part of Viśvarūpa's offerings went to the Asuras and therefore cut off his head in anger. Thus he incurred the sin of brahmahatyā. After a year, in order to rid himself of it he divided his sin into four parts among (1) the earth with the boon that dug portion should get filled up, (2) the waters with the boon of increasing volume when mixed up, (3) trees with the boon that branches cut off grow again, and (4) women with the boon of ever cherishing the passion of love. The saline soil, bubbles and foam, gum and monthly discharges respectively represent the brahmahatyā sin.28

With Vajra made of Dadhīci's bones (made by Tvaṣṭr from sun's tejas—Matsya P.), Indra attacked Vṛtra as Rudra attacked Yama. The encounter took place on the banks of the Narmadā in the first Tretāyuga. Battle described. Seeing his friends escaping in fright, Vṛtra encouraged them to stand and fight. He also disabled Indra's Airāvata, and addressed him at length. Indra cut off one of his arms. With the remaining arm Vṛtra hit Indra while the Vajra slipped from his hands causing concern to the gods.

Encouraged by the straight speech of Vrtra, Indra took up his Vajra and cut off his other arm. Vrtra swallowed him; but Indra, the vanquisher of Bala, got out of his stomach and cut off his head. Indra's regret at the murder of another Brahmana. The sin of brahmicide, says the legend, took the disguise of a Candála woman and ran towards him in a terrific form when he entered the lake Mānasa and lived in the lotus stalks for a thousand years Invited by Brāhmanas, he performed an Aframedha and got rid of his sins.⁵

Father of three sons Jayanta and others through Paulomi. Getting to know that his mother Diti was observing a vow to get a child to slay him he offered to do service to her. Once he found her slack in her duty. He entered the womb and cut the child into seven pieces and each of these again into seven. At her request he offered to her to give them the rank of gods, by name Maruts, who were allowed to share in the yajñas Diti thought of another son Vajranga who bound Indra and placed him before her. Was released on mediation from Brahma and Katyapa.

Reported to Kṛṣṇa the wicked deeds of Naraka. Got a gift of Maniparvata of Naraka from Kṛṣṇa. Visited by Kṛṣṇa and Satyabhāmā. At the latter's wish, Pārijāta was removed without any intimation. Indra, induced by Indrāni attacked him with all gods Kubera, Varma and others were defeated. Indra himself offered resistance. Garuda disabled his elephant and Indra retreated. Satyabhāmā made fun of him 'Do not run, Lord of Indrānt' Indra apologised. Kṛṣṇa answered that Indra was not in the wrong as he (Kṛṣṇa) took the offensive. Indra saked pardon and begged that his son Bibhatsu he protected. Kṛṣṇa told him that Pārijāta would go back to him when he left the mortal world. Returned to his city with all gods."

Kṛṇṇa explained that rain was the work of nature, and that no credit went to Indra. So he persuaded them to worship cows, Brāhmaṇas and hills. So it happened. Indra who was thus deprived of his ball grew wrathful and sent down a continuous heavy downpour of rain creating panic in the minds of gopes. Kṛṇa took hold of the hill Govardhana and held it aloft as an umbrella steadily for seven days. Astonished at this, Indra withdrew his rains and Govardhana was planted in its place.

Uddhava (1)—a pupil of Brhaspati, a friend of Krana, and a minister of Vrsnis. Requested by Krsna, he took a message to Nanda and Gopis of Vraja, where he was duly welcomed by Nanda. The latter said that he believed with Garga, Kṛṣṇa and Rāma to be gods when Yasodā narrated Krapa's exploits as a child. The conversation lasted all night. After his morning prayers Gopis surrounded him and asked whether Krana was well and remembered them. Uddhava was struck with their devotion and told them of Krana's promised visit in the near future. After spending some months when Gopls entertained him on Kranalila, Uddhava left for Mathura.1 Went with Krana to Sairandhri's house, and to Akrūra's and returned home.3 Heard the secrets of Krana's self from him and was a Haridasa.2 Went with Krana to Dvaraka, and respected him by holding camara. defeat of Jarāsandha resulting in the release of imprisoned kings;5 was sent in advance by Rāma to the Kurus to inform them of his visit. Went to see the Pandavas at Upaplavyam.⁷ Honoured Nanda.⁸ A member of the Yādava sabhā. Was stationed to defend the E. gate of Mathurā when it was beseiged by Jarasandha. Consulted by Krsna on the right detachment of the army.9 Met Vidura on the Yamunā and was asked about the welfare of his kinsmen. Touched deeply by Vidura's query, Uddhava described how the Lord spent eleven years with Balarama, Gopas and Gopis, doing miracles and how he persuaded Nanda to perform gosava. He narrated the heroic deeds of Krsna and the destruction of the wicked. Concluded by saying that he would reside at Badari after the Yadavas as it was the Lord's wish adding that Maitreya had been asked to be the guru of Vidura.10 Narrated to Maitreya the story of Siva destroying Dakşa's sacrifice.11

Joined Yadus in defeating Pauṇḍraka.¹² Saw Yadus leaving for Prabhāsa, and understanding Kṛṣṇa's mind, requested him to take him also to His eternal abode. Kṛṣṇa warned him of the advent of Kali and asked him to go about always meditating on Hari. In the course of the dialogue Kṛṣṇa related the conversation between a Yadu and a Brāhmaṇa ascetic, laying emphasis on how the Brāhmaṇa learnt lessons from earth, hill, air, sea, archer, pigeon and others and regulated life by cultivating detachment. Listened to the Lord's discourses on various spiritual topics. After being thus well instructed he made Badari his home to spend the evening of his life.¹³

As a lad of five he worshipped Hari without caring even for breakfast. He knew the yoga power of Hari. Of superior bhakti.

Consort of Siva, also Gauri; originally Dāksāyani, daughter of Menā and Himayān, Original name Aparna. Her garden a sakti The world of: Adhidevata for the planet Soma. Festivities at her birth.7 Going with her father to Siva's house, they met Rati weeping on the way. She said that Siva had burnt down her husband. On this Uma's father did not like the idea of giving his daughter to such an ill-tempered person. Umā requested permission to do penance and was allowed. Indra at this time thought of the seven sages to bring about Siva's marriage with Uma. The sages were satisfied of her steadfast love to Siva and had his consent for the marriage, celestial women dressed Uma, as also the god Siva; amidst divine music, the couple went to the city of Mahagirinagara and Brahmā officiated as priest: After the marriage they left for Mandaragiri *

Once Umā made a doll with elephant face and dropped it in the Ganges. It became a huge figure and was claimed as son by Umā and the Ganges respectively. Then Umā grew a tender Aśoka plant when Brhaspati and others told her that she would have a real son and that trees and dolls were no satisfaction; once she heard a yell of noise and was told of the play engaged in by Gaṇas, and then her eyes attracted Vīraka. She expressed to Siva for a son like Vīraka. Siva asked her to have him as her child. He was sent for and nursed by Umā. 11

Touched by Goddess of Night, she became black in colour. Siva found fault with her and after reproaching him with his past deeds, she left him for penance. Vīraka appealed to her when she said she would return as Gaurī. She asked Vīraka to see that no lady entered her harem. Meanwhile Āḍi, son of Andhakāsura entered Śiva's abode in the guise of Umā but was slain by Śiva. Hearing from Vāyu that a lady entered her home, she cursed Vīraka to be born on the earth; out of her rage came out a lion which Brahmā gave to the Goddess of Night, who was asked to leave Umā for the Vindhya hills. Now Umā became Gaurī and entered Śiva's abode when Vīraka stopped her, as he did not at first recognise her. Convinced of his mother's identity, he requested her to recall her curse and was assured of a place in Devagana.¹²

While Umā was sporting with Siva, Agni entered the harem in the form of a parrot. Noticing this Umā left the bed and Siva made Agni drink his $v\bar{v}rya$. Out of the scattered $v\bar{v}rya$, there sprang up a beautiful pond where the six Pleiades bathed and took water in a lotus leaf. Blessed by them the Devī got the garbha and out of her left side came out Subrahmaṇya.¹³

Going through the Udyānam again Śiva spoke to her of the greatness of Benares.¹⁴ Satī in previous birth.¹⁵

Kainsa (1)—the eldest son of Ugrasena¹ and brother (cousin-Vâ. P.) of Devakl. Took part in the festivities connected with the marriage of Devakl and Vasudeva, when he heard a voice from air that her eighth son would kill him. He at once drew his sword to slay Devakl when Vasudeva entreated him to spare her life promising to give him all her sons. To this he agreed. He did not take notice even of the first boy. Subsequently Nārada confirmed what he heard from the welkin. So he killed all her sons and put her and Vasudeva in jail. He waited for the seventh and was particularly afraid of the eighth Being informed of the birth of a girl, and without listening to his sister's appeal to spare the baby, he dashed it against a stone. It flew heavenwards and said that the baby born to vanquish him was safe. Disheartened, Kamsa let Vasudeva and Devakī free. Consulted his ministers who advised him to kill all infants in the kingdom, and to hurt all Brāhmaṇas and cows, the root cause of Hari's dharma. Messengers were sent out on this mission.²

An incarnation of Kālanemi. Threw his father Ugrasena in prison and assumed regal administration.³ Encouraged by his Asura friends such as Pralamba and Baka, as also by the Māgadhan king, he tyrannized the Yadus who left the land for other countries like Kuru, Pāñcāla and others. The Brāhmaṇas were afraid of him.⁴

Heard from Nārada that Kṛṣṇa and Balarāma were Vasudeva's sons; when he went to slav Vasudeva. Nārada prevented him from it. He then threw Vasudeva and his wife in prison. He summoned his councillors and asked the Mallas, Cāṇūra and Mustika to get ready for a wrestling match with Krsna and Rāma; ordered his mahout to station the State Elephant at the gate of the enclosure (Ranga) and get Krsna and Rāma trampled under its feet: when he was asked why he was out to kill those two boys, he narrated the story of his mother once going in the garden thinking of her husband Ugrasena. Then a Gandharva Drumila personated Ugrasena. Discovering that he was not her husband, she asked him in wrath who he was. He tried to console her saying that she would give birth to a heroic son. The chaste lady retorted that he would be cruel and unrighteous. Such being his birth, he hated his kith and kin. Then he commanded to commence the Dhanuryaga. Akrūra was sent for and ordered to take his chariot and bring Krsna and Rāma to the Dhanuryāga with all gopas. proposed to kill all of them and rule the kingdoms with the help of friends like Jarasandha. Thanked by Akrūra for an opportunity to visit Krsna and Rāma; Akrūra reached the Vraja and was welcomed by the brothers and Nanda. Informed of their arrival by Akrūra. Much concerned to know of the breaking of his bow by Krsna and further the killing of his guards. He had no sleep all night and had bad dreams, all in fear of Krsna. Next morning he drove to the wrestling ground and occupied the royal seat with his ministers, was perturbed to learn of the death of Kuvalayāpīda and its guards. Became furious at the death of his five mallas and the running away of others. Ordered the banishment of the two brothers, robbing the gopas of their belongings, and imprisonment of Nanda, killing of Ugrasena and Vasudeva. Kṛṣṇa attacked him direct, pulled him down from his throne and killed him. His eight brothers who offered fight were slain by Rāma Death welcomed by Gopis and Akrūra. Kaca—the son of Brhaspati, deputed by gods to learn Samifteni vidyā irom Sukrācārya, offered himself as a disciple and admitted as a pupil by Sukra, conducted himself to the satisfaction of his teacher and his daughter Devayāni for a period of 500 years. Once while out in the woods tending Sukra's cows, the Asuras killed him and left his body to be devoured by dogs and jackals. The cows returned home but not Kaca. Devayāni suspected of foul play and reported his death. Sukra brought him back to life.

On another occasion he went to the woods to gather flowers for Devayani and this time the Asuras ground him to pieces and mixing them with surā offered it to Sukra who drank it. Again Devayani persisted wanting him back to life This meant Sukra's death for he had to come out by tearing open his belly. So he taught Kaca the Samjioni vidyā so that he might restore him after his revival. Thus he did and so he learnt the vidyā. After a sojourn of ten hundred years he returned with due leave from his teacher Now Devayani offered to marry him but he pointed out that it was not proper to marry his preceptor's daughter. So she cursed that he would not get the fruits of his vidyā and he retorted that she would not find a Brāhmaṇa husband but only a Kṣatriya. Returned to the gods who gave him a share in their oblations; put to death by Vṛṣaparvan's men.²

A progenitor and a yogi,2 performed in Krtayuga austerities on the banks of Sarasvatī for 10,000 years; when Hari appeared before him, he praised Him and asked for a suitable wife. Devahūti was suggested and the Lord disappeared. Manu came with his wife and daughter to his hermitage, and was suitably received. Kardama agreed to marry his daughter and lead a householder's life until the birth of children. After wedding, Manu and his wife returned home. Pleased at his wife's devotion, created an aerial car artistically built and furnished. Took his wife after her bath and dress round the earth for a hundred years. Nine daughters were born when according to original contract he was anxious to leave her for woods to practise yoga. Noticing her anxiety at his departure, he consoled her that she would give birth to Hari who would bring solace to her. On the birth of Kapila, Brahmä and other seers called on him; gave his daughters in marriage, took leave of his son and retired to a life of penance.

After bathing in the Yamunā, they made a figure of the Devī with sand, and worshipped it as the representation of the Devī for a month. Their object was to win Kṛṣṇa as their husband. Prayers were also sent to Bhadrakālī by rising early and bathing in the Yamunā. To test their sincerity Kṛṣṇa saw them one day playing in the river naked leaving their clothes on the banks. He removed these to the top of a Nīpa tree near by. The girls asked for the return of their clothes, and threatened to report to the king. Kṛṣṇa asked them to receive their clothes from him. He said that their vow was fruitless as they bathed naked, and he returned their clothes on their saluting him with both their arms. He then blessed them and asked them to go back to the Vraja which they did.

Kucaila—a poor Brāhmana and class-mate of Krsna. Having many children and distressed by poverty, his wife advised him to meet Krsna. She begged some Prthukatandula, and sent it as present to Krsna. When he came to Dvārakā, Krsna recognised him and entertained him. Rukminī also honoured him. Kṛṣṇa recalled their school days, and their loyalty to Guru Sandipani, and how he reciprocated it. Once when they went out and were caught in storm and rains, the Guru came in search of them with great anxiety. Kucaila gave Krsna the Prthukatandula which Krsna shared with Rukmini and heartily ate of it. After spending a jolly night, the Brāhmana took leave of his friend and went home, ruminating on the way why Kṛṣṇa did not offer any riches to him. When he neared his place, he found tall mansions lavishly built and furnished. His wife extended him welcome with servants. He knew it was all the work of his friend Krsna. Spent a righteous life ever meditating on Hari's lotus feet.

Just on the eve of the avatar, Brahma and other gods pray to him in the womb of Devaki.4 Birth at the time of constellation Robini, first new moon in winter, Abbijit Naksatra, Jayanti night, Vijaya-muhurta and festivities connected with it, enjoyed by Vasudeva and Devaki. Their prayer, and Krana recalled their previous births. Taken to Yasoda's delivery room at Nandayraja, stupifying the guardsmen of the jail and crossing Yamuna in floods at dead of night, Yogamāyā born to Yasodā taken back to the iall ward. Yogamaya announced her birth to Kamsa, His jātakarmā.7 Killed Pūtanā, when at Kamsā's instance, she attempted to poison him by nursing him; Yasodā warded off evil, (Raksā) to Krana by waving cow's tail round him, by placing cow's dung on the twelve points of his body and by purifying him with cow's urine, with prayers to Hari to protect him from evil spirits.*

The first turning in bed was celebrated with festivity. Kṛṣṇa slept under cradle beneath the cart when he kıcked the cart which capsized. This roused suspicion of gṛṭaṣṭā in Yaśodā's mind. Sānti done when cows, food, etc., were given to Brahmanas. Once the demon Tṛṇāvarta created a whirlwind which swept away all Vraja and took up baby Kṛṣṇa high up in the sky to the embarassment of Yaśodā and others. At that time Kṛṣṇa took hold of his neck and strangled him. He fell doad. The child Kṛṣṇa opened his mouth and showed his mother the whole universe.

Nāmakaranam as Vāsudeva. Boyish sports in Vraja, charged with eating mud; lived with Nanda and his wife who were the same Dropa and Dharā born as Nanda and Yasodā by the command of Brahmā. When once Yasodā left the churning pot to mind the boiling milk overflowing in the oven. Krapa broke the curd pot and ran away with butter to feed a monkey. So he was bound with a rope to an ulūkhala (mortar) but the rope always fell two inches short in spite of bits being added. At last Kṛṣṇa pitied her and allowed himself to be tied; with the mortar he passed between two tall Arjuna trees, when down fell the trees, out of which emerged two men Nalakubera and Maṇigrīva (sons of Kubera) who had been cursed by Nārada. Kṛṣṇa blessed them and sent them back to their abode.¹⁰

Enjoyed the company of Gopis singing and dancing. Gifts on his janmanakṣatra day. Noticed a Daitya in the guise of a calf and taking him by the tail, he whirled him to death and flung the body on the top of a kapitha tree. On another occasion Asura Baka met him in the guise of a crane, when Kṛṣṇa tore its jaws asunder. Once when in the forest with his playmates, Agha, an asura friend of Kaṁsā took the form of a boa-constrictor with a view to devour the cattle and all boys together. All of them entered his open mouth with Kṛṣṇa who took his life out of his body and came out to the wonderment of gods. The ajāgara skin when dried was a cave for Vraja people. Agha, however, attained salvation.¹¹

One day the boys sat and ate merrily when the cattle had gone far into the hill and dale and Kṛṣṇa promised to bring them back. In the meantime Brahmā had them hidden. So Kṛṣṇa created duplicates of the cattle and the children that had been lost. These went home as usual and this continued for a year, when Brahmā released the hidden cows which suckled their calves, and came to see the child, the one Brahman without a second, and belauded the baby Hari, and returned to his region. More boyhood sports.¹²

In regularly tending cows, imitated voice of beasts and birds in Brindāvana just like a rustic. Once the cattle drank of the poisonous waters of the Yamunā and became unconscious. After reviving them he found the reptile Kālīya in the waters. He immediately jumped into the pool and was enclosed in its coils. At this Nanda and the whole Vraja moved to the banks of the river with great concern.

 $^{^{10}}$ Bhā. X. Chaps. 8, 9 and 10; Vi. V. 6, 8-19. 11 Bhā. X. Chap. II. 12 lb. X. Chaps. 13 and 14; Vi. V. 6. 30 to the end of Chap. 9.

Rāma advised them to be cool. Slowly Kṛṣṇa brought the reptile under his control, and getting on its hood, began to dance, when the Kāliya acknowledged defeat. Finding his end near, Kāliya's wives prayed to Kṛṣṇa to spare him. The generous Lord allowed him to make his abode in the sea, thus purifying the Yamunā once for all.¹²

After this incident the whole Vraja was encamped for the night in that vicinity A forest fire attacked the camp, when Kṛṣṇa swallowed it and protected its immates. His dances and songs, other past-times Among the games was one in which the victor rode on the back of the vanquished. Kṛṣṇa carried Śridāma on his back.¹⁴

Once again the cattle went astray in the thick forest, and surrounded by fire they bellowed in thurst and hunger. Kṛṣṇa and his playmates found it impossible to reach the spot. So Kṛṣṇa got upon a tree and called the cattle by names, and they responded Aaking his followers to shut their eyes, he swallowed the forest fire When they opened their eyes, they found themselves in their homes.

Krsna filled Brindavana with Gandharvan music and played at times on flute. Hid the clothes of Gopis who observed Kātyāyanı vrata to get him as their husband, and returned them only when they saluted with their two hands over their heads as a penance for bathing naked during the period of a vrata. It was a severe day in summer when some Gopas approached him for food. Krsna advised them to go to the neighbouring vajñaśāla and ask for food, singing the praises of Balarama and himself. The sacrificers were silent at their request. Krsna asked them to repeat their request to ladies in his name. The ladies took four kinds of food and in spite of protest by their male relations, they came to have darsan of the Lord and placed before Him all the eatables. On Krana's advice they went back to complete the sacrifice, and assured them of their being accepted by their relations and the world. Their male relations regretted having missed a chance of meeting the Lord. Then food was distributed among his friends.¹⁶

Kṛṣṇa saw the Gopas worshipping Indra and as residents of hills and forests, he suggested worship of mountains and cows. When this was accepted. Indra sent a heavy downpour which was warded off by Krsna, a boy of seven, 17 holding up the Govardhana for a week. A visit from Indra and Surabhi who anointed him, Indra, of Goloka and gave him a new name Govinda. Rescued his father Nanda from Varuna region and took him with other Gopas to Brahmahrada where the Vedas were praising Hari. Once when playing on a flute, the Gopis who were in the midst of household duties stopped them and came to where he was in spite of protest from their male relations. Krsna advised them to go back to Vraja and be loyal to their husbands. They refused to return as their minds were fixed upon him and longed for moksa, and insisted they were his dasis and should be accepted. After some time he disappeared for their peace and redemption. They indulged in gitam, when the Lord appeared in their midst and shone like Purusa among śaktis. After consoling them he engaged them in a rāsakrīda, and finding them wearied, he engaged them in watersports and sports in the upavana on the river-bank. There was no carnal act of sin. The Lord who had no bandha, did all this in sport.18

Released Nanda from a reptile who turned out to be vidyādhara Sudarśana. One day Śankhacūda a follower of Kamsā seized some ladies of Kṛṣṇa's party and ran away. They cried for succour. Kṛṣṇa and Rāma followed. He left the women behind and ran. Rāma took charge of the ladies while Kṛṣṇa pursued him, cut off his head and took the cūḍāmaṇi which he presented to Rāma. Killed Arīṣṭa in the form of a bull who entered the Vraja and terrified the inmates.¹⁹

Killed Kesin who came to the Vraja in the gulse of a horse and became Kesava; killed one Vyoma in the guise of a gopāla; seen milking cows with Rāma by Akrūra who came to Dvārakā at the instance of Kamsā; agreed readily to start for Mathura at Akrūra's message. With Akrūra, the two brothers arrived at Mathura, and asked their friend to go home. He requested them to visit his house to which they agreed only after vanquishing Kamsa Next day afternoon, the two brothers and their Gopa followers went round the city and the women from terraces enjoyed the sight of Krsna and Rama. On the way he met a washerman and asked for good clothes. On his refusal, he was killed, and all his clothes taken and distributed to his Gonas. Then they met a garland-maker Sudama who voluntarily offered flowergarlands Him he blessed and went. Next he saw a hunchback woman carrying unguents to Kamsa. For the mere asking she offered the whole of it to them. So Krana converted her to a handsome lady who invited him to her house. This was agreed after finishing his work. Then they went through the bazaar and were rewarded with betels, sandal, etc., by merchants Lastly they entered the place where the bow festival was held. Krana broke it easily. The guards who attacked them were put to death. It was evening when they returned to the camp outside the city

On his way to the wrestlers' arena, Kṛṣṇa vanquished Kuvalayāpida with some effort. Taking its tusks, entered the enclosure with Balarāma. Accepted challenge from the wrestler Cānūra. The latter fell dead after fighting The same fate met Sala and Tośalaka. Finding Kańsś ready to attack his relations, Kṛṣṇa overpowered him and killed him in a minute' condoled with the women of the dead and set his parents free, consoled his parents for their troubles and was embraced by them in love Enthroned Ugrasena, as Yadus could not sit on the throne owing to a curse of Yayāti. A reign of peace ushered in Mathurā.

Nanda and Gopas were sent back to Vraja with honours. Upanayanam of Kṛṣṇa. With Balarāma Kṛṣṇa went to Sāndīpani and learnt all arts in 64 days. Hearing that Sāndīpani's son was washed away by the sea at Prabhāsā, Krsna went to the spot and was told by the seagod that an Asura Pañcajana carried him off. Then he went to Yama's abode, and recovering his son, handed him over to the guru as gurudakṣiṇa and came home. Requested Uddhava to go to Vraja with a message from him to Nanda and Gopis that he would be visiting them shortly. As promised he went to Sairandhri's house with Uddhava. It was decorated according to rules of Kāmaśāstra, and after a brief stay, left it for Akrūra's with Uddhava and Rāma. Akrūra extended a roval welcome. Krsna praised him as their guru and requested him to go to Hāstinapur and find out the position of the Pandavas. Returned to their residence.22 Krsna heard of the siege of Mathurā by Jarāsandha and was devising a plan of attack when two chariots descended from heaven fully armoured. Also Sudarsana, his cakra and other weapons came down to him and to Rāma. Rāma took a chariot and the hala (plough), but was considered by Jarasandha as a boy and not his equal. Krsna made defence arrangements at the four gates, and went out in his chariot of Garuda ensign by the northern gate to where Caidya and Māgadha were. Caidya's challenge and death; prevented Rāma from fettering Jarāsandha, and entered the city in victory and gave the spoils of war to Ugrasena, their king. Second and third defence of Mathura. Prevented Kumbhānda and Kūpakarna from using māyā in war by the application of vijñānāstra. Honoured after victory by the Sabhā of the Yadus.23

He next desired to see Gomanta and the hill fortress. Left with Rāma towards the south crossing the Yamunā, and many towns and villages. Saw on the way Paraśurāma engaged in austere tapas and bowed to him. Paraśurāma suggested killing Srgālavāsudeva, a wicked chieftain of Karavirapura at the foot of the Gomanta. When they reached the place, Srgālavasudeva offered fight, and his head was cut off by Kṛṣṇa Welcomed by the citizens of Karavirapura, they spent there four months after sending the spoils of war to Mathura. Got up the hill Gomanta where Garuda met Krsna and placing his crown on his head, left. Reached Mathura with a large army Finding Yavana besieging the city and Jarasandha leading the eighteenth expedition, Krana in consultation with Rama resolved to build a fortress of 12 volumes in the sea to place their kith and kin in security. So a city was built according to Vāstu šāstra to which Indra sent Sudharmā and Pārriāta. Varuma supplied horses and Kubera the eight Nidhis. It became a Yadava settlement. Attacked by (Kala) Yavana, Krana unarmed fled to the cave where Mucukunda was asleep. Here Yavana was burnt to ashes by Mucukunda's energy. Mucukunda's surprise to see Krana and his prayer for salvation. Krana spoke of his future birth as Brahmana and final salvation.24

Kṛṣṇa returned to Ugrasena at Mathurā, raised the slege of Yavana troops and went to Dyaraka with his plunder On the way Jarasandha's army in makara vyūha attacked him but was broken by throwing a huge tree. Returned to Dvārakā with spoils of war left by Yavanas. Jarāsandha's attack again when Rama and Krana fled to the Gomanta whose topcrest was burnt, while Jarasandha thought they were dead they reached Dvārakā safe. Sent Kṛṭavarṇa to ascertain from Hastinapura whether Pandayas had defeated Drupada. Married Rukmini by the Rakeasa form of marriage, defeating Jarasandha and others of the Caidya party in battle Received with due honours the Brahmana messenger from Rukmini and promised to do the needful. With the Brahmana and Rama, Krana drove from Anartas to Vidarbhas in a night. Was honoured by Bhismaka and allotted separate residence outside his capital. Ladies of

Kundina said that Krsna was suitable to Rukmini. Seeing Rukmini returning from the Devi temple, he took her in his chariot in the midst of other kings and drove fast. Jarãsandha and others pursued but soon returned with disappointment. Rukmi's resolve to kill Krsna and then enter Kundina. When he offered battle and was about to be killed, Rukmini appealed to the Lord to save her brother. At this he was tied to the chariot with his hair and moustache shaved. Advised by Rāma that punishment of Rukmī was not in order. Married Rukmini according to Śāśtras amidst festivities in Dvārakā. Owing to Śiva's grace, got sacred sons of whom one was Pradyumna by Rukminī, being Kāma in a previous birth. Killed Sambara who stole the baby. Saw the lost Pradyumna and his wife Ratī in his residence, and hearing their account from Nārada. embraced the couple. Present at Pradyumna's marriage.26

Requested Satrājita to give the Syamantaka gem for their king but he refused. Suspected by Satrājita to be responsible for his brother Prasena's disappearance in the forest; recovered the jewel from Jāmbavan after fighting for 28 days, and got also his daughter Jāmbavatī in marriage. The jewel was returned to Satrājita in the public assembly. Married Satrājita's daughter Satyabhāmā, and when the jewel was offered, it was returned. Went with Rāma to the Kurus after the rumoured death of the Pāṇḍavas and Kunti; met the Pāṇḍavas at Pāñcāla city in the guise of Brāhmaṇas; killed Śatadhanvan, the murderer of his father-in-law Satrājita. Sent for Akrūra and asked him to exhibit Syamantaka in his possession, and returned it to him afterwards.²⁷

Kṛṣṇa once went to Hāstināpura to see the Pāṇḍavas and was heartily welcomed. Paid respects to Yudhiṣṭhira and Bhīma, embraced Arjuna and received respects from Nakula and Sahadeva. Kuntī welcomed him also. When he was spending that winter there, he went to the forest with Arjuna for hunting and there met an accomplished lady when Arjuna addressed. Hearing that she was the daughter of the Sun waiting to marry Kṛṣṇa, the latter took her home. In the meantime Kṛṣṇa esked Viśvakarmā to build a city for the Pāṇḍavas. Acting as Arjuna's charioteer, he caused the Khāṇḍava forest to be given over to fire. Returned to Dvārakā and married Kālindi, Sun's daughter. Then he married Mitravindā of Avanti, an aunt's daughter Received Satyā, daughter of Nagnajit of Ayodhyā by curbing the ferocity of seven bulls, with a large dowry of chariots, elephants and treasure. Jealous kings were driven away by Arjuna. Married another aunt's daughter Bhadrā. Took Lakṣmaṇā, daughter of the Madra king and thousands of maidens from Naraka's hārem.

Indra came one day to Dvārakā and reported to Kṛṣṇa the mischief done to him by Naraka. Entering Prāgiyotisa, Kṛṣṇa pulled down ramparts and walls and cut off Mura's five heads. His seven sons attacked him led by Pāṭha in vain. Naraka also attacked and had his head cut off. Kṛṣṇa entered the city welcomed by its people, saw Maṇiparvaia of Indra and the umbrella of Varuṇa and gave them beck to them. Earth, mother of Naraka came before Kṛṣṇa and handed over the kundalas of Aditi, informing him that Naraka was her son by the touch of Hari in Vārāha form. Then he entered the harem of the Asura and sent away 16000 (some 16100) maldens to Dvārakā and them he married, after distributing the spoils of war among his fellow companions. Had by his wives 18000 sons.

With Satyabhāmā he visited Indra's abode and after giving the kundalas to Aditi, he came back with Pārijāta against Indra's will, because his queen wanted it. He enjoyed the company of all his wives, taking a separate form for each wife. Indra's attack on Kṛṣṇa with gods like Varuṇa, Vāyu, etc., for taking away Pārijāta. Their defeat and Indra's apology. Kṛṣṇa consoled him. Welcomed back in Dwārakā.

Love quarrel with his consort Rukmini described. Once when Kṛṣṇa was sitting at leisure, Rukmini who was nearby fanned him. Krsna indulged in fun and asked her how she chose a poor fellow like him leaving princes of equal status with her, and added that he was willing to let her go and marry a powerful Ksatriya prince. This put out poor Rukmini who wept bitterly, speaking words showing her unflinching loyalty to him. Noticing her sincerity Krsna consoled her that he simply cut a joke. He said that she knew him to be Hari to whom Rājarsis like Anga, Nahusa and Gaya had dedicated their lives leaving their kingdoms, and that Brahmā and Śiva sang his praises. Krsna assured her of his lovalty to her. In this way he led a household life just like an ordinary mortal. Each one of his eight chief queens gave birth to ten sons, and each thought that Kṛṣṇa was only living with her, as there was a Kṛṣṇa by the side of each lady including the 16000 of Naraka's harem. played with them blindman's buff, exchanging betels, scents, The chief queens were Rukmini, Satyabhāmā, Jāmbavatī, Satyā, Kālindī, Mādri, Mitravindā, and Bhadrā. Attended Aniruddha's marriage with Rocanā at Bhojakata. Heard from Nārada of Aniruddha's imprisonment by Bāṇa of 1000 arms and besieged Sonitapura. Defeated Siva who came on Bāṇā's behalf and at Siva's request, let Bāṇa go with his four arms remaining. Returned to Dvārakā with Aniruddha and Usā.31

Heard from a Brāhmaṇa of the externment of Pāṇḍavas to the forest, and riding on a chariot with Satyabhāmā, met them and consoled them; came back with Subhadrā and Abhimanyu. Heard a report of a huge lizard in a well, and lifting it up, he found it to be a divinity who revealed himself as king Nṛga and who went to heaven. Taught the citizens of Dvāraka on the invisilability of Brāhmaṇas' property.³²

Krana heard of Paundraka's invasion of Dvārakā in his absence. Had a message from him either to give up the title of Vasudeva or offer battle. Ugrasena and others laughed at this. Krana went to Kāśi and had the heads of Paundraka and his ally cut off and their army destroyed. Krana's return to Dvaraka. An abhicara Agni was sent by Paundraka's son through the grace of Siva but was vanquished by Hari's cakra. By his yoga power Kṛṣṇa appeared at the mansions of each of his 16000 wives, engaged in a normal domestic life. When Nărada entered every house, he saw the same Krana in each, got up early in the morning and meditated on Brahman, gave cows, etc., to the Brahmanas, saw first ghee, then mirror, cows, gods, etc. Heard from a messenger of the difficulties of kings imprisoned by Jarasandha. Advised by Uddhava to vanguish Jarasandha with the aid of Bhima at Yudhisthira's Rajasuya Krsna's route to Hastinapura where he was received by the Pandavas. Draupadi welcomed his wives and, these were put up comfortably. Hearing Jarasandha still unconquered, Krana with Bhima and Arjuna went to Girivraja in Brahmanas' disguise and asked for meals. They then threw off their disguise and called him to battle in which Bhima won. After releasing prisoners, Krana enthroned Sahadeva, son of Jarasandha.23 The kings thus released after the fall of Jarasandha were 20800, praised the Lord and requested that they might ever remember Him. Krana asked them to go back to their places and assume charge of governments by ruling righteously. Sahadeva arranged their bath, dress and meals, after which they left for where Yudhisthira and his family were. Received the first honour in the Rajasuya of Yudhisthira when Sisupala protested in a vilifying speech. His head was cut off. Lived in Hastinapura for some months at the request of Yudhisthira and others. Attended to arghya and padya for Brahmanas in the Rajastiya Welcomed Nărada who informed him of the necessity of vanquishing Sālva. Left for Dvārakā hearing of its blockade by Sālva who applied illusory powers. Kṛṣṇa broke his car and killed him.

Kṛṣṇa went as an ambassador of the Pāṇḍavas to Duryodhana. He was sought to be made prisoner in vain; came back determined to declare war. In the war served as Arjuna's charioteer, and after the war Kṛṣṇa condoled with Dhṛtarāṣṭra and after anointing Yudhiṣṭhīra, returned to Dvārakā.

One day there came Kucaila, a Brāhmaṇa classmate of Kṛṣṇa, a poor man with many children. Induced by his wife he visited Kṛṣṇa who welcomed him with Rukmiṇi, indulged in talks of old school days, partook of the pṛṭhuka rice which Kucaila's wife had sent, and sent him away after keeping him for a night.³⁴

Left for Syamantapañcaka for solar eclipse, met Gopis there and taught them the nature of the Absolute. Sages waited on him and praised his glory. His joy at Vasudeva's sacrifice. Honoured Nanda. Praised by his father, Kṛṣṇa replied that Ātma is only one. At the request of Devakī to get back all her sons killed by Kamsā, Kṛṣṇa entered Sutalam and with leave of Bali, took them to his mother who embraced them in affection. These children who were degraded gods gained their old form and went to heaven.³⁵

Subhadrā was his sister, and Arjuna carried her off with his knowledge and against the wish of Balarāma. He went with sages to Mithilā where was his Brāhmaṇa devotee Śrutadeva. The latter and the king Maithilā welcomed him and requested him to stay. Kṛṣṇa did not like to disoblige them and so stayed in both houses taking two different forms, thus purifying Nimi line, and pleasing Śrutadeva.³⁶

Performed Aśvamedha sacrifice in the course of which he had to go to Vaikuntha with Arjuna to recover the lost children of a Dvārakā Brāhmana who preferred a complaint. After return with the lost boy, he had his avabhrta celebrated in the Yamunā. Then he continued his righteous rule and spent a good time in Dvārakā enjoying pleasures with his chosen wives ³¹

His service to the world was to kill Daityas and relieve the burden of the Earth. Resolved to destroy the Yadu race and reach his eternal abode, approved of the curse of the sages against the Yadu race. Brahma and other gods visited him, appealing to him to go back to Vaikuntha. He agreed. Uddhava expressed a wish to follow him but was advised by Krana to lead a righteous life. Incidentally Krana narrated to him the conversation of a certain Avadhuta and Yadu. Insisting on yama and niyama, and duties incumbent on varna and āśrama. Then he described who was said to be in bondage, who was a free man and a righteous person, and he also explained the need and importance of Satsanga. He proceeded to instruct Uddhava on the nature of the gunas, and their causes, laying emphasis on satva guna. Then he explained Bhakti, Dhuana, siddhis and their nature. He afterwards narrated the Vibhutis of Hari, described the dharmas of varna and aframa, explained what was jāāna and orhiana, giving a list of duties to be observed by all. He further instructed on the three yogas-jūāna, karma and bhakti, on the Vedas, and on the principles of Sankhya and Sänkhyavidha. He then narrated the story of an Avanti Brahmana who turned out ascetic after being a miser. He enumerated the different characteristics of the three gunas and the evil effects of bad association, recapitulating kraysyoga, jñāna yoga and bhakti yoga Lastly Uddhava was advised to go to Redari.28

Advised his relations to go to Prabhāsa, and there deluded by him, they fought among themselves and died. Balarāma also met his death. Kṛṣṇa heard this while sitting under a pappala tree. A hunter Jarā by name aimed his shaft at his foot little thinking that it was the Lord. Coming to know that it was Kṛṣṇa he regretted much. Kṛṣṇa consoled him and permitted him to go to Heaven.

Gangā (1)—a R. source of, sacred to Hari; brought to the earth from Heaven; a mahānadī from the Himalayas.

Originating from the foot of Viṣṇu and watering the region of the moon falls from heaven into Brahmā's city; issuing from the nail of the great toe of Hari's left foot; Dhruva holds her in his crown; the seven sages perform austerities with her waters; issuing again from the moon she falls on Sumeru and thence to the four quarters of the earth; hearing of her, the desire to go to Gangā, see, touch, bathe in her waters—all purify a person; falling in four directions, takes the names of Sītā, Alakanandā, Cakṣu and Bhadrā.³

Effort made by Amśumān, Dilīpa and Bhagīratha and hence her name Bhāgīrathī. Held up by Hara and then let; flowed in seven streams through several territories in the four directions, sanctifying the regions and the people there.⁴ Its waters drunk by Janhu, and let out by his ears and hence called Jānhavī.⁵ The seed cast off by Siva in the sky was borne by Gangā and was swallowed by Agni; phoetus left on the Himalayan slopes became gold, which was utilised in building the yagāaśāla at Naimiṣa. At her confluence with Yamunā (s v) was the avabhṛta of the sacrifice of Prajāpatis. On its banks Bharata performed horse-sacrifice. Here Yudhiṣthira had his avabhṛta bath after Rājasuya. Here were done fumeral rites of the dead children of Draupadī. Here again Parikṣit observed vow of fasting unto death. Visited by Balarāma. The Sagaras sent to heaven by the Ganges waters "Gangā as devi."

Originally of three-fold path, the Chāyāpathā being in the nakṣatramaṇḍala; addressed by Agni to bear Rudra's garbha, Gangā accepted the task and gave birth to Kumāra. Gangā refilled the ocean, after Agastya drank it dry.

Manu put the growing fish in; washed off the city of Hastināpuram; contains 3½ crores of tirthas, forms the cure for all ills; released in seven streams by Sankara, three to the west, three to the north and one Bhagirathi, sacred in Kanakhala."

Gajendra (1)—the legend of Viṣṇu freeing the elephant in trouble. While wandering in the hills, this lord of elephants felt thirsty and entered a lake in the Trikūṭa hill. While drinking water, a crocodile caught hold of its feet. Finding himself on the brink of death, Gajendra bestowed his thought on Hari on account of the vāsana of the previous birth. Pleased with his prayer, Hari flew on Garuḍa with his cakra and released the animal from the crocodile. The elephant attained a form like that of Hari. This elephant was in his previous birth a Pāṇḍyan king by name Indradyumna devoted to Hari but cursed by Agastya to be born as elephant.¹ Hari blessed Gajendra who got mokṣa by satsanga.² Hence Gajendramokṣa.³

Gopi-(girls) see Kātyāyani vrata. The gopi women were enchanted by the music of Kṛṣṇa, took to Brindāvana. and worshipped him. By singing his glories and through Kāma they became one with Him.1 On another occasion they were so much moved by his music that they left their household work, children and male members and came to Brindavan. Though they were asked to go back they refused, and desired to attain His feet. While they were enjoying his presence, Krsna suddenly disappeared. They wandered all the forest in search of Him, addressing all trees and plants as to his whereabouts. During all this time each thought that every one of them was Krsna and imitated his boyish exploits. After vain search they came to the very place wherefrom they started and meditated on his greatness. They praised him in the form of gitam looking forward to his arrival. Soon he was in their midst and consoled them. They took part in the rāsa krīda where was seen a Krsna between every two women. They sang and danced unconscious of the loosening of their jewels, braid or clothes. When they sweated in fatigue, Krsna wiped off their sweat. They then enjoyed water-sports, and sports on the river-banks in the upavana. By dawn they repaired to their homes.² When some gopis were forcibly taken by Sankha Cūda, Krsna released them and killed him.3 When Kṛṣṇa was away in the woods, the gopis who were at homes sang in praise of his venu gītā.4 Gopis heard of Kṛṣṇa going to Mathra with Akrūra and characterised Akrūra to be only a Krūra as he brought about Krsna's separation from them. They turned their minds on the past deeds of Krsna, and stood motionless as pictures at his leaving them. Kṛṣṇa assured them of his return soon. Uddhava was sent by Kṛṣṇa with a message to gopis and gopas. The gopis mistook his chariot for that of Akrūra. They all surrounded him and enquired of Kṛṣṇa and his attitude towards them. Uddhava brought relief to them by delivering Kṛṣṇa's message while they recounted to him his deeds at Brindāvan. Pleased at their attachment to the Lord, Uddhava took leave of them after spending some time there. They went to Syamantapañoaka and met Kṛṣṇa who took them aside and consoled them so much so that they were all in contemplation of Him. Left for Mathurā. and attained salvation by satsanga.

Curaketu (v)-a Sārvabhauma and king of Sūrasenas. His queen was Kṛtādyuti; though he had a number of wives he had no children. When he was brooding over this, there came the sage Angiras, getting to know his mind he performed a ritual in honour of Tyasta and the remnant of offering was given to his eldest queen, Krtadyuti, who brought forth a son. Though the king was glad, his wives grew jealous and poisoned the child to death. The king, queen and others ceaselessly lamented. On this Angiras and Narada came on the scene and consoled them. Angiras addressed him on the instability of life, illustrating it by the story of Bhoja. Nārada instructed him into a mantropanized. By meditating on this for seven nights, he was told, that he would see Sankarsana and get over the illusion relating to duality. So he had his purificatory bath at the Jamuna and was initiated into the vidya by Narada. By meditating for seven days, the king became the lord of Vidvadharas. He then praised Harl in the form of Ananta and had a darsan of the Lord.

Once he flew in the air and saw Siva sitting with Parvatt on his lap in the presence of his attendants and others. He laughed at this, which enraged Parvati who cursed him to be born an Asura. Citraketu alighted from his aerial car and begged for pardon. After he went away, Siva told Parvatī that Citraketu was a devotee of Hari, and hence his devotee also. Therefore he deserved pardon. Pārvatī was appeased, and Citraketu was born as Vṛṭra.

Cyavana (II)—a son of Śukra and Paulomi; when he was engaged in tapas he was covered by an anthill. eves were seen through two holes therein. Once Sukanyā who came there with her father saw two luminous objects in the anthill and pierced them with a thorn. This resulted in blood flowing from the eyes. The king asked the sage's pardon and offered his daughter in marriage to him. Having married a princess, the sage requested Aśvins who were on a visit to him, to make him a youth. They advised him to bathe in a siddha lake nearby. He thus found himself thoroughly changed. With him Sukanyā enjoyed life. Her father came there some time after and was not aware of the change in the sage's form. He took him to be a paramour and scolded his daughter. When he came to know the fact he was much pleased. In the yajña performed Cyavana offered soma to Asvins who were so far denied a share, being physicians. Indra resented this and wanted to kill Cyavana. Jagat-syste-Evolution of Tattvas, etc. When the Saktis did not attend to their function of creation, the Lord with Saktikālā entered into twenty-three tattvas by dividing himself into three parts—adhyātma, ādhidaiya, and ādhibhauma with tenfold prana, Agni as his mouth, Varuna as tongue, Asvins as nostrils, etc. Then came the four varnas. At first five varieties of Ajfiāna were created, viz., andhatāmisra, tamisra, mahamoha, moha, and tamas Ashamed of these sinful creations, Brahmā created seers like Sanaka, Sananda, etc. They also did not proceed with the work of creation as was desired So Brahmā grew angry and down came Rudra from the midst of his eye-brows He was assigned places and women. Finding his creation intolerable, Brahmā sent him away for penance, and produced ten mind-born sons, Marici, Atri and others, and a daughter Sarasvati. Then came the Vedas and other literature. Further the Creator's body got into two halves—one Sväyambhuva and the other Satartipa. These were parents of two sons and three daughters Their descendants filled up the whole of the earth. Jamadamı (1)-a sage of the Vaivasvata epoch, (Bhargava); a son of Rcika and Satyavati, to attain a son for himself and for Gadhi, he made a caru to be taken both by his wife and mother-in-law, the latter to get a Ksatriya and the former a Brahmana, then he entered the forest for penance, by mistake the caru intended for the mother was taken by the daughter and vice-versa; Rcika understood the mistake and told his wife that a cruel son would be born to her, she implored him to give her a good son; Jamadagni, born to her; produced by eating (jama) the Vaisnavägni.1 Entertained Ariuna (Haihaya) with the help of his Kamadhenu. The king desired to own her; but on being refused, he took her away by force. She was recovered by his son Parasurāma who killed Arjuna. Regretted his son's action in killing the king and found fault with Renukā his wife who saw Citraraths. He asked his other sons to kill their mother but they declined. Parasurāma killed them and his mother to please his father but he requested that they might come back to life to which the sage agreed. But the sons of Arjuna took vengeance and slew the sage in the presence of Renuka. Through the prowess of his son, Jamadagni got back his body and became the seventh in the Raimandala Married Renuka, daughter of Renu the youngest son was Rāma. According to the Vāyu Purāna Renuka is also known as Kāmali and is said to be the daughter of the Iksvāku, Suveņu. Heard of Kamśā's death from his widowed daughters and resolved to destroy all the Yādavas. He besieged Mathurā with twenty-three aksauhinis, stationing at the four gates king of Kalinga and others. Drums were sounded as a call to arms. Told Kṛṣṇa that he was a boy unfit to fight him and asked Rāma to meet him in battle. Rāma challenged him on the western gate. Finding all his army followers killed, Jarāsandha attacked Rāma. When the latter was about to bind him with ropes, Kṛṣṇa asked that he be set free. Jarāsandha went home greatly distressed. Three months after, Jarasandha collected another huge army of twenty-three akşauhinus, encamped at Yamunā banks and slept that night. Kṛṣṇa divided his army into three divisions and attacked the enemy on all sides by surprise. All Jarāsandha's followers took to flight leaving all their belongings which were presented to Ugrasena.

Then he called on Bāṇa at his city Sonitapura soliciting his help against the Yadus. Bāṇa's welcome and offer to help; with this force he again besieged Mathurā. Fight between him and Rāma. Defeat of Kumbhāṇḍa and retreat of Kūṇakarṇa and other soldlers of Bāṇa to their city. Jarāsandha's return to the city.

Felt angry at Srgala's end and led another expedition to Mathura. Defeat and return. In this way he led seventeen expeditions. During the eighteenth expedition a certain Yayana sent by Nărada besieged the city. Jarasandha attacked the Yadus going to Dvaraka after vanquishing the mlecchas by the formation of Makaravvūha when Krens destroyed it by throwing a big tree on it. Rama also gave them mighty blows Then he turned upon two brothers who were unarmed and who ran to Pravarsana hill. Jarasandha followed them and burnt the hill by beneging it from all sides. The brothers leaped into the plains and regained Dvaraka, but were taken by their enemies to be burnt deed. His defeat at Krana's hands during the svayamvara of Rukmini is mentioned. Arrival at Kundina; went to Sisupala and comforted him that all was due to fate, and returned to his city.4 His defeats were recalled by Krtavarman.5 He had his capital at Girivraja, where thousands of kings were kept imprisoned. A preliminary to Yudhisthira's rayasuya was to kill Jarasandha. Finding him unconquered and also devoted to Brahmanas, Krana, Bhima and Arjuna went to him in Brahmana's guise and asked for meals. Jarasandha understood them to be Kastriyas and still recalled Bali giving the earth to Hari in a Brahmana's guise So he offered to give his head. Then Krana and his two friends revealed themselves and invited him to battle. He refused to fight a coward who left Mathurā for a sea-girt-city, nor with unequal Arjuna. But he agreed to fight with Bhīma. Then battle continued for 27 days and Bhīma felt despondent. Kṛṣṇa gave him a hint by tearing a twig behind. So Bhīma pulled him down and tore him to two pieces from head to foot. One of those who failed to hit the fish in the svayamvara of Lakṣmaṇā.
